Our American Cousin"--Continuation of the Case of Laura Keene vs. John [8. Clarke----Verdict for Plaintiff by Direc tion of the Court. From the New York Times 1

Superior Court—TRIAL TERM—October 9th,—sefore Judge Jones and a Jury.—The trial of this case was resumed at 11 o'clock this morning, by re-calling to the stand on behalf of the plaintiff Joseph Jefferson, who testified that the chief value of a dramatic composition, like the "American Cousin," consisted in its attractiveness to the public its adaptability to the stage, and in having the exclusive right to its representation. Witness was now performing the "American Cousin" at the Olympic in this city, and w was successful. [Witness shown Miss Keene's manuscript of the "American Cousin."] I recognize this as the manuscrip: that I read in 1858; it does not contain all the alterations made by me in the play; there was dialogue, situations and acting intro duced on its first representation that are not in the manuscript.

William Stuart, lessee of the Winter Gar den in 1865, was called to the stand, and produced an abstract of the receipts and expenses of the representation of the "Ameri-can Cousin,' at that theatre in October last: Mr. Clarke's profits for the twenty-four nights were $2,168 67, being one-half of the total profits of the representation; I put up the play as manager of the theatre; Mr. Clarke had nothing to do with it; I received no notice from Miss Keene, before the play , was brought out, not to produce it; it had been played all over the country; I presame Mr. Clarke furnished the copy of th play that was represented at the Winte Garden. Plaintiff's attorney here offered in evi dence an exemplified copy of the proceed ings in the suit tried in the United State Circuit Court, Philadelphia, in which Laur-Keene was plaintiff and John S. Clarke and William Wheatley defendants.

Mr. James objected to the evidence on the ground that the decision of that Court way only a decree in equity directing the defend ants to pay Miss Keene $500 for a license to produce the play; that the $500 was paid by Mr. Wheatley, and they should claim that this payment was equivalent to a receipt from Miss Keene permitting the defendants to play the "American Cousin" at any time and place they saw fit; that the decision of the Philadelphia Court did not establish her ownership of the copyright of the play but only an exclusive license vested in her to produce the play in the United States, The Court was of the opinion that a proper construction of the law only gave the defendants a license to produce the play in the Philadelphia theatre, where it was then being represented.

Plkintiff's counsel here rested his case. Defendant's counsel called as the first witness for the defence C. W. Taylaure, who testified that he had been a theatrical agent for fifteen years; had known the "American Cousin" to be played at various theatres from 1860 to 1865-among other places.at Baltimore, Alexandria, and Cumberland; Miss Keene had nothing to do with the management of the theatres at those places. Mr. Andrews, being recalled, stated that the "American Cousin" was played at Providence from memory; several of the actors had played in the piece, and they made it up together from memory; at Ford's Thee tre, in Washington, it was played from Mr

Clarke's manuscript. William Wheatley, proprietor of Niblo's Theatre, testified that he was a defendant in the Philadelphia suit, and paid the $500 to Miss Keene under the decree of the Court. From that date to the present time the play has been produced at various theatres throughout the United States without Miss Keene's consent; the play, as produced at Philadelphia, was played from the original London manuscript; the property of Mr. Silshee

The defence here rested their case, Mr. James moved a dismissal of the co
