THE REPUBLICAN INVINCIBLES. Closing Meeting of the Campaign.

On Saturday evening the Republican In-On Saturday evening the Republican Invincibles met at their headquarters, Seventh and Chestnut streets, for the purpose of presenting to Drum Major H. A. Hoffman a magnificent baton, and also to close their campaign labors. The Invincibles were present with full ranks, and during the ceremonies great enthusiasm prevailed. The meeting was opened by Colonel William McMichael, who said the Club had gathered together at this closing meeting of the cere McMichael, who said the Club had gathered together at this closing meeting of the campaign, to part, with the understanding that they would come together again whenever the cause of liberty shall require their services. The Invincibles had labored to maintain the great principles enuciated by Congress, against the policy of the President, who had been false to those who had given him their confidence and to the principles he had professed. His heart was full of rehe had professed. His heart was full of rehe had professed. His neart was full of re-joicing and enthusiasm over the great vic-tories the American people had so recently achieved at the ballot-box. He was about to introduce some of the loyal men who had led forth our columns to a crowning and triumphant victory, and in behalf of the club he bade them a hearty welcome to

Hon. Charles O'Neill was then introduced and received with great cheering. He thanked the Invincibles for their kind attention to him at the time of the election, and congratulated them on the great victory achieved at the ballot-box—a victory that had been won against as great odds as ever a battle had been fought. It had been fought amidst the blandishments of power and all the seductions of Government patronage; yet, in spite of all this, and every art and device that could be brought to bear, Philadelphia had dared to roll a majority of mere than five thousand against "My Policy!" The speaker alluded to the persecutions of the independent voters who had dared to cast their ballots against that policy. Hundreds of men had been turned out of the Navy Yard because they could achieved at the ballot-box-a victory that out of the Navy Yard because they could not conscientiously vote for Andrew Johnson. Yet, in spite of this arbitrary proscription, affecting good, true and industrious men, amounting to thousands we had won. He referred very eloquently to the triumphs that had been achieved in we had won. He referred very eloquently to the triumphs that had been achieved in the election of Myers, Kelley, Taylor, and especially General Cake, of the Schuylkill District, by a significant majority, to Congress. If there was ever a signal rebuke given to a traitor; it was given in the Westmoreland District against the traitor Cowan, when John Covode was elected in that district. He spoke of the triumph achieved in the election of the gallant General John W. Geary against almost unprecedented opposition, in such a manner as to elicit three cheers for the newly-elected Governor. Mr. O'neill, throughout his remarks, was frequently applauded. was frequently applauded.

Col. Forney made a few remarks, congratulating the club in its efficiency during the campaign. Gen. Joshua T. Owen, who was next in-Gen. Joshua T. Owen, who was next introduced, was greeted with cheers. He said he was glad of this opportunity. at the close of the campaign, and just as the conquering forces were going into winter quarters, preparatory to another campaign, to be enabled to pay his respects to the Republican Invincibles. They had borne a prominent part in the contest, and by their enthusiasm, their ardor, and uniform good conduct, had their ardor, and uniform good conduct, had given character to the campaign and contributed to its success. He did not consider the election of city and county officers of any account whatever in comparison with the re-election of our members to Congress. He had gone out into the State, and contributed all he could for the cause in the Fifth district and others he enumerated, where he supposed our cause was in dan-ger. But the result has shown that his apprehensions were unfounded, and even in those districts we have been triumphant. The speaker was glad that a perfect harmony and unity of action had subsisted between the "Invincibles" and the "Boys in Blue," and that they had fought bravely together in the good cause. Together "Together the Bile," and that they had lought bravely together in the good cause. Together "we have met the enemy, and they are ours." If the same union continues to exist between them, Pennsylvania can never be defeated. He spoke of the danger through which the country had already triumphantly passed, and foretold that all future dangers would be as brayely encountered and overcome. The march of prosperity is open before us; the immense wealth of the open before us; the immense wealth of the country will be developed, and more than our fathers ever anticipated will be accomplished. The victory must be ours. Not only must traitors to the country be punished, but those who were traitors to our own party must be punished. Those who fought the battle through must be considered as allies and associates in the battle vet to be fought. Again he would congretate yet to be fought. Again he would congratulate the Invincibles in the name of the "Boys in Blue," and assure them that when the plan of the next campaign is developed they will be as ready to co-operate as they were in that which has just closed.

The General retired amid applause.

Major Calhoun, of Kentucky, said:—The last time he had the honor of addressing the Invincibles in that hall it was at the presentation of a banner to be carried at the front of the column. Upon one side of that banner was a man endeavoring to climb a greased pole, but could not reach the top, indicative of Clymer's abortive attempt at climbing. He did not reach the top, and never will. On the other side the "Boys in Blue" were represented in trying to raise up a soldier, which they have successfully accomplished in the triumphant election of accomplished in the triumphant election of their brave and gallant leader, Gen. John W. Geary: He referred eloquently to the torn and tattered flags that he had witnessed torn and tattered flags that he had witnessed in the ranks of the army. The holes and rents in them did not add greatly to their beauty, but this detracted nothing from their glory. Under those torn flags our comrades fought and died. So your banner has lost none of its glory or beauty by being defaced by the hands of a Copperhead. But had the elections gone the other way, the riot thus occasioned would have been but a sort of prelude to the great conflict which riot thus occasioned would have been but a sort of prelude to the great conflict which would have inevitably befallen the country. We belong to a great party, and we have sheathed our swords and laid down our arms until we shall again be called upon to defend our liberties. Eternal vicilence is arms until we shall again be called upon to defend our liberties. Eternal vigilance is indeed the price of liberty. He had never doubted the success of our cause in Penn-sylvania. He felt that God had never forsylvania. He feit that God had never for-saken his people. Our principles were bound to triumph, and they have triumphed. [Applause.] We have simply asked for justice, and justice we must and will have. The widows of our brave soldiers scattered all over the land—their orphaned children all over the land—their orpnaned children—the blood of thirty thousand comrades, lying in their, graves, all cry aloud for justice. They tell you that treason is a crime and must be punished—that traitors must be made to suffer, and that the people who saved shall rule this country.

The Major continued for some time exhibiting the fact that Union people are as much outcasts from their homes now as in 1861; in showing the folly of Andrew Johnson's talk about his sufferings, and in advising his heavers to remain steadfast to the cause of liberty and justice. The Major's remarks were enthusiastically received. eccived. Colonel William McMichael, President of the club, came forward and said: It has always been one of the most honorable parts of the record of the most honorable parts of the record of the Republican Invincibles, that it is an association earnestly devoted to the cause of law and order. Every member of our Club is proud of the good name which we have your formulation. good name which we have won for intelligent and orderly conduct in the parades and excursions during the various campaigns in which we have engaged. Enthusiastic in by appeals to the good sense of the people, and not by disorder or resorts to brute force. We would injure no man's property; we would interfere with no man's free expression of opinion. But, my comrades, the Invincibles, because they are law loving citizens, are not the less resolute and determined men. This Club is made up of young men and of brave men; and while they never seek a fight, yet when one is thrust upon them by wanton and unpro-voked attack, they go into it to win. I do not intend to discuss now the recent assault upon our Club, nor the manner in which it was repelled. Our conduct has received its best criticism in the public judgment already so favorably expressed. My object now is to perform, on behalf of our body, an act of justice to a brave and faithful man. Act of justice to a brave and faithful man. We engaged for service during the recent campaign the drum corps commanded by Drum-Major Harry A. Hoffman. They proved most efficient, always cheerful and ready for work. Street fighting was not a part of their contract of service; but being singled out for attack they defended them. part of their contract of service; but being singled out for attack, they defended themselves like men. During the afray in which they were engaged, the handsome baton so often gracefully borne by their drum-major, was much injured, and I am deputed to-night to present him with this as a substitute for the old one, and as a mark of the approval of this Club.

plause, handed Drum Major Hoffman an elegant gold-plated baton, upon which was he following inscription: "Presented to Drum Major Harry A. Hoffman by the Republican Invincibles of Philadelphia, in appreciation of his services during the political campaign of 1866, in the Keystone State." Accept this, air, from our Club, as a mark of our appreciation of your faithful discharge of duty, and carry from us in your future life a hearty God speed.

Captain Curry, of Delaware, accepted the baton on behalf of the recipient, and thanked the Club for Major Hoffman, drum-major, in an elequent manner.

He spoke of the admiration which he felt Hespoke of the admiration which he felt in common with the community, of the active part which the Invincibles had borne in the campaigh which has just closed. They had done much toward the victorious result, and he believed they would be ready again when the country needed their services. The Captain spoke at some length of our national affairs, his remarks being received with great applause, and concluded with the following apropos illustration. He said the present condition of affairs reminded him of a certain individual who, going home considercondition of affairs reminded him of a certain individual who, going home considerably inebriated, was very anxious to get hold of some milk, and not being able to find it, he asked his wife where it was. "Down in the pantry." "Well, my dear, (hic) is it tied up in a rag or is it lying around loose?" [Laughter.] If any one should want to know the present whereabouts of the Copperhead party, probably they would like to know whether it is tied up in a rag or "lying around loose."

they would like to know whether it is tied up in a rag or "lying around loose." [Great laughter and applause.] When he concluded, a motion was made for adjournment, and after cheers for the drum corps, Governor Geary and the United States Congress, the Invincibles adjourned for the campaign, to meet at the call of the officers.

SOLDIERS' BOUNTIES.—In the regulations Soldiers' Bounties.—In the regulations promulgated from the War Department regarding the payment of bounties under the act of July 28, 1866, it is prescribed that soldiers enlisted for "three years or during the war," who were discharged by reason of the termination of the war, shall be considered as having served out the period of their enlistment, and are entitled to bounty under the act. The subject having been under the consideration of the Accounting Officer and the Paymaster General, the Second Comptroller of the Treasury is of the opinion that the 20th of August, 1866 (the date of the President's proclamation declaring opinion that the 20th of August, 1866 (the date of the President's proclamation declaring the insurrection to be at an end), should be taken as the date of the termination of the war within the meaning of the rule referred to. As enlistments under the act of July 22, 1861, ceased on the 18th of July, 1864, no soldier enlisted under that act could have been discharged on account of the war before serving two years.

MORTON MCMICHAEL. CASTOR WHEELS.

CASTOR WHEELS.

TOR HEALTH AND STRENGTH USE CAPE. WELL & CO.'S PATENT GLASS CASTOR WHEELS.

These wheels are designed for Pianos, Redsteads, &c. We claim that they give to Pianos a greatly increased force of sound, without detracting from the harmony and melody of the irstrument, rendering every note more distinct to the est. This is so apparent that they are now being applied by many to these valuable musical instruments. Dr. Valentine Mott, previous to his ceath, pronounced the Glass Castor Wheels an invaluable invention for bedfast invalids, who are guasded against the damp floors after undergoing the process of cleaning, or where dampness is produced in many other causa. Aside from this, Housekeepers are relieved from the dread of having their carpets cut or torn, as frequently happens from those now in use, often caused by a rust, which adheres with glue-like tenacity. No such annoyance can possibly proceed from the Glass Castor Wheels, as we all know that glass is non corrosive. There are no rough or undinished edges to the Glass Wheels, such as we often find is those of from, and the latter, though amoothly dinished, will cook rust, from the dampness of the armosphere, if nothing eise, producing roughness on the surface, or edge, while the former will always maintain the smoothbres of glass, just as they are finished.

By sleeping upon glass wheels you retain all the electricity yen had in your body on retiring, and you get in the morning feeling as fresh and active as a young man. Glass being a non-conductor, the electricity gained walle in bed cannot pass off. Ask your doctor what he thinks of the Glass Castor Wheels. Ask him if all diseases, with the exception of chronic diseases. Are not caused from the want of electricity, when he want in the proven on application at our office. No. 203 Race street, Philadelphia, or at our Factory, at westville, New Jersey, where we have some sixty heads employed in the manufacture of the Glass Castor Wheels.

4100 will be paid to any one who will say they have not
