he fell.

"Should earth against my soul engage-" Here weakness prevented him and he whispered to his wife, "You finish it." He slept a good deal, but seemed always conscious of his wife's presence, frequently putting up his restless hand to touch her face, and remind himself, in his blindness, of her loved features. When he talked it was of his unfinished work, his convictions of the cause in which he fell, his anxieties for his wife left alone in a cruel world, and of his enemies, and murderers, always forgivingly, as if they knew not what they did. At different times, too, he spoke of the riot, relating facts and incidents just as I have set them down. It afflicted him much to leave his wife penniless. He had a little money in bis pocket when he came to the Convention, but that with the gold studs in his bosom, had been plundered by some of the ruffians who took part in mutilating his person. Thus he lingered until the next day after Thus he ingered until the next day after his injury. When the morning of Sunday, the 5th of August, came, he remembered that he had an appointment to exchange pulpits with a colored brother in the oity, nd said, "Emma, we must send word to Bro. Miles that I can't come. I don't feel quite well enough to preach." that 1 can't come. I don't leel quite well enough to preach." As time went on his mind began to wan-der, and he fancied himself in his own pulpit. He invoked the Divine blessing, he gave out a hymn and sung, wounded and suffering as he was; his wife, who wept as she thought of the melody of his once fine voice, joined him, at his request, half choked by her tears. Then he prayed with her, sung again and preached, taking for his text, "Out of the the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." After these exercises he ex-pressed his wish to close with the Lord's Supper, and immediately began the beau-tiful ceremony. His wife, anxious to gratify him, skilfully aided with such meagre con-veniences as were at hand, to carry out his touching fancy. He partook with her what seemed to him the symbolic bread and wine." "We both drink from the same cup, Emma," said he. Another hymn, a benediction, and the sufferer began to grow weak, as if in-

[From the Watchman and Reflector.] "Good-by, Emma," he said. "I shall not be gone long. It can't take more than ten minutes to open the Convention, and then I shall come right away. Look for me by 3 o'clock at farthest," and the young man kissed his wife and hurried away to thecity. That day was desined to be one among the most memorable in the annals of human wickedness since the famous St. Bartholomew's. The members of the Union Con-vention looked forward to it with apprehension. They knew that the spirit of the late rebellion still survived in New Orleans, and they could not hope that they should be permitted to assemble without some moles-tation from disorderly individuals; but they tation from disorderly individuals; but they had no suspicion that the masses of the city would rise against them, organized for de-liberate bloodshed. They did not, know that all the arms had been bought up till all the gun-shops contained not so much as a pocket pistol. They did not know that the mayor had telegraphed to the President that there would certainly be a riot, and had received the assurance that the milter had received the assurance that the military would not interfere with the civil power. They did not know that the police force had been increased by the addition of a gang of been increased by the mutitude of a gauge of blood-thirsty men, and that the municipal authorities had agreed apon signals, and arranged to begin the riot themselves, Watched by no suspleion and awed by no Butler's strong right hand, the conspirators Butler's strong right hand, the conspirators were suffered to perfect their preparations, and when the morning of the 30th of July dawned, the treacherous officials appeared at the station-houses full armed, and wait-ing the opportunity for their bloody work. The pastor of the Colliseum Baptist church. Henry.

Rev. Jotham W. Horton, had been requested New, Johnam W. Horton, had been requested to open the Convention with prayer. Moved by the warmest Christian sympathy for the freedmen, this young New England minister had gone to the South with his wife to give his best energies to their welfare. He was a man of sincere plety and a large heart; pure as a child, self-denying where duty was concerned, to an extent that often made him suffer, and so neaceable that though him suffer, and so peaceable that though repeatedly insulted and even once fired upon, and though conscious that he was fatally marked by malignant disloyalists, he would never go armed. After taking leave of his wife, Mr. Horton proceeded in the cars, from his residence in Carrolton, to the city. Ever apt to look hopefully on the worst prospects, and slow to suspect evil of his fellow-men, he had felt no fears of injury for this day, beyond perhaps a forcible seizure and commitment to the parish prison.

The hour arrived for opening the Conven-tion and Mr. Horton, having entered the hall, stood up to offer prayer just as the clock struck twelve. Strongly and fervently his words came up, breathing petitions for the peace of his country and the deliverance of the oppressed. God heard him, but with that prayer his servant's work ended, and then he gave him for a little while to the cruel wrath of his enemies, that he might make that wrath praise him. Immediately on the sounding of the stroke of noon from the city clocks, and simultaneously with the opening of Mr. Horton's prayer, the armed police filed out of the several stations, three hundred strong, and marched towards the Institute. Some of them entered the hall during the prayer, a mob in the meantime rapidly collecting round the door, and hardly had the good man uttered the closing "amen," when a miscreant fired a bullet at his head.

There could no longer be any doubt of the intentions of the officers and the mob. The latter assailed the windows and rushed in at the doors. "Kill him! kill him?" they yelled. "Shoot every cursed Yankee in the house!" Just then all the bells in the city began to toll. It was the preconcerted signal of slaughter, and now the horrors of the Fire in New York Last Night. Shorily before 10 o'clock last night as Officer Gass, of the Eleventh Precinct, was pairoling his beat, he discovered smoke issching from the gateway of the three-story brick bullolings known as Nos. 87 and 83 Mangin street, owned and occupied by Andrew Chris-pistols, knives and clubs, and commenced their appointed work of murder. Resistance was hopeless. The Convention broke up in the wildest confusion, some of the members falling dead, and many mortally wounded in the hall, while a few who could fled. The Union men saw that they were doomed. In-stead of protecting them and arresting the rioters at the firing of the first shot, as with their force they could easily have done, the police headed the attack, and there is reason to believe that one of their number fired the first shot.

Mr. Horton received five balls in his body, and fell. These balls were fired by po-licemen. Not satisfied with their work. they seized him, battered his head with their billies, stabled him, kicked and dragged him over the pavement to the first station, the mob following behiad, cursing, and trampling him with their shoes. Thrusting him in a cell, he was left mangled and senseless.

Meantime the shopkeepers of the city had closed their stores, and strolled about, grati-fied spectators of the findish carnival, greet-ing the murderers of Horton and every squad of policemen that passed them drag-ging a bleeding loyalist, with shouts of "Good! good! Kill the white nigger." Around the Mechanics' Institute and in the adjacent streets upwards of one hun-dred negroes lay weltering in their blood, and the dead-carts drove by loaded with warm corpses and bodies of the wounded still writhing with life, all tumbled indis-criminately together criminately together. In one of these carts the mangled Horton

In one of these carts the mangled Horton was fung after lying awhile at the station house; and under a stifling load of dead and wounded negroes, his stomach crushed in by a blow of a heavy plank, he was taken to the Marine Hospital. Furious with the taste of blood, the police and their fellow Thugs raged up and down some of the streets of the city, calling out the names of well-known loyalists, declaring their intention to slaughter every Northern man in New Orleans. In the midst of the excitement and carnage, however, the bayo-nets of Federal troops appeared, and furnets of Federal troops appeared, and fur-ther murder was prevented. The mob dispersed, and the blood stained streets, and battered windows, and muffled groans from distant hospital-wards alone testified to the distant hospital-wards alone testified to the horrors of the 30th of July. As the hours of that bloody day passed, the wife of Mr. Horton waited at her home, five miles distant, for his return. Three o'clock came, the limit he had set for his absence. She looked long and anxious to catch a glimpse of him approaching along the familiar street. He did not come and her anxiety greet into alarm. her anxiety grew into alarm. To add to her terror a breathless messenger arrived at her residence, and warned her that she would not be safe there that night, for trou-ble had happened at the State House, and the secessionists were searching for all the Unionist in the city and suburg. Heating the secessionists were searching for all the Unionists in the city and suburbs. Hastily summoning the negro servant, she told her to bar the doors and windows, and with a few hurried preparations set off for the city to learn the fate of her husband.

Having formerly boarded with a Mrs. E —, she took her way first to her house, and made known her anxious errand. She was told of the riot and massacre, and at once feared the worst. Several young men that boarded at the house volunteered to search for Mr. Horton. They returned late in the evening, but could give her no news, save that he had been badly wounded. They dared not communicate their own con-victions of his fate.

deed his work was done, "I am going now, Emma," he whispered. "I'm sorry you can't come with me, In the fall you'll come."

Then there were no more connected sen-tences, but incoherent syllables of prayer, and whispers of saintly hope, "In the vale--the vale--home yonder-good-bye," and an six o'clock that Sabbath evening the gentle spirited Horton fell asleep in Jesus. To the tender consideration of her friends, never so numerous as now, and to the more never so numerous as now, and to the mer-ciful consolation of Almighty God, who never piticd her as he now pities her, we commend the weeping widow, and pray that she may long live to share the honor of her martyred husband's fame. Т. В.

Upon doing so, an im-mense volure of smoke and fames, were discovered issning from an inside door, which was standing wida-open and leading into the court-yard of the buildings. The steamers were soon on the ground, and every ef-fort that could possibly be made was used to extin-guish the flames, but the noble efforts of the firmens proved of little avail-the combustible nature of the material making it an easy prey to the flames, and by midnight the contents of the buildings, were entirely destroyed, and only the four blackened wails left to re-mind one of what had been. The buildings, which were 30 feet in leagth by 100 feet deep, were damaged to the extent of about $10,000. The value of the stock and machinery destroyed is variously estimated at from $0,000 to $0000, but it is shought that it will scarely exceed the former sum Owing to the lateness of the hour, and the fact that Mr. Christian lives out of town, the insurances could not be definitely arcrataned.
