A SSAIN'S ELIN'

A BOLD THIEF.—An individual, named George Root, while passing along Market street, west of Seventeenth, yesterday took a fancy to a coat which was hanging in a lancy to a coat which was hanging in front of the clothing store of Julius Pagle. He took possession of the garment, and didn't even stop to ask the price of it. Later in the day Mr. Pagle observed Root passing the store. He had the coat on. He was then arrested. Alderman Jones held him in $600 bail to answer.

THE CHESTNUT.—Last evening at the Chestnut the new play by Bouckast, called "Janet Pride," was presented for the first time to a Palladelphia audience. The entire drama constitutes one scene of the misery caused by a drunkard, and yet there is not a single in cident that offends the most delicate taste. The secret of this is that the drunkard has been a gentleman, and cident that offends the most delicate taste. The secret of this is that the drunkard has been a gentleman, and though a forlorn wretch, degraded by crime, his innate refinement of feeling never deserts him, and whether in his cold, cheeriess garret with a weeping wife and sick child, in the streets at night rioting with his wicked companions, or concealed in the marshes with a fellow convict dreading detection and arrest, the same genial, kindly nature concedes treefy to the claims of all. It was a rare treat to see Mr. G. H. Clarke personate this character. His conception of the part did full justice to the author, and it was so fathfully acted that it was impossible to repress a tear for the just but terrible retribution suffered by the arthor of so much misers to others. Miss Orton acted the part of Janet Pride beautinity. Though there were many opportunities to rant, she toned down her expression of every emotion, and shared equally with Mr. Clarke the merits of the performance. Mr. Mackay had a gem of a part which he acted exquisitely; he was responsible for more than one tearing eye in the audience. Mr. Lennex had as 200d part and humored it capitally; but he allowed his unfortunate propensity to interpolate what he seems to consider wit, and marred several of the author's really ammsing scenes. Miss Cooper played the part of the Watchmaker's daughter quietly, and with good taste. Mr. Jennings had a short but strong part which he acted with judgment; he is generally a very pleasing actor. Messrs. White, Foster and Frye personated the remainder of the characters in a most creditable manner. The play cannot fail to become popular, for it appeals to the stronger feelings of the heart, and in many scenes is as intilling and powerful as some of the best scenes in "Oliver Twist" and "The Drunkard." The play will be repeated until further notice.

French Opinion of a Coming Revolution in England. [From Galignani's Messenger, Oct. 13—Evening.] The Monde, seems to think that the Reform agitation excited by Mr. Bright may lead to a revolution in England and transfer the conduct of affairs from the higher classes to the people. Our contemporary can be but indifferently contemporary can be out indifferently acquainted with the political habits of the country in question, if it seriously entertains such an opinion. Those monster meetings, which are sure to take place in England when any great political question is agitated, are in reality nothing more than safety valves to allow normals revoltement to display itself. ow popular excitement to display itself freely and furnish to the persons in power useful indications as to the real state of popular feeling. When at last a change appears inevitable the government of the day yields to the pressure from without, or if it declines, from conscientious motives, to accord the required concessions another ministry replaces it and sions, another ministry replaces it and effects the modifications called for. There is nothing revolutionary in such proceedings, and although there may be considerable movement and much loud talking throughout the land—as in the cases of the Catholic emancipation, the repeal of the corn laws, and now for electoral reform—all subsides when the vexata questio is arranged either by entire concession or by a compromise.

The Monde, therefore, in speaking of revolution in England because Mr. Bright uses somewhat stronger language than his case may seem to demand, or perhaps than he would act up to him-self if he had the power, is under an exaggerated impression which the Eaglish themselves would not by any means acquiesce in. The following is an extract from our contemporary's observation: This appeal to the people might lead to social revolution. Mr. Bright does not go so far; what he wishes "is to reestablish popular representation in England, to make the House of Commons the organ and representative of the nation; and not of a small class. Thus Mr. Bright, in appearance, seems to demand only a simple extension of the suffrage. Does he not desire something more, or does he affect only to see so far, in order not to frighten timorous minds It is difficult to decide; but it is probable that so wide an agitation will go beyond its object. A constitution is not one of those fantastic edifices which children construct with geometrical figures, the foundation, the wings and the body of which may be altered at will, without spoiling its appearance; a constitution is a complex, complete, living thing, and must express the real relations between different classes of a nation. If, then, the agitation now in progress in England is to end in causing power to fall from the hands of the aristocracy into those of the people, it will be for that country an immense revolution, which will have its reaction sooner or later on English laws and manners and on both domestic and foreign policy. For the rest, this revolution, if it be accomplished, will not be for the profit of the middle classes, but that of the working men; the tenderness shown by Mr. Bright in his latest speech towards the former will impose on no one; the English artisans are too practical to draw from the fire of a revolution only a few liberties which the middle class would monopolize. Libel Suits.—The St. Louis Democrat, of Friday, says: Messis. Grover and Shipley, and Sharp and Broadhead have entered into a grand Claybank speculation. They into a grand Claybank speculation. They have commenced in the Circuit court four libel suits against the proprietors of this paper, in behalf of Edward Brooks, Thomas H. Larkin, Joseph O'Neil, and Peter A. Berthold, who claim that being included in a printed list of rebels, disloyalists, rebel sympathizers, &c., they are damaged to the extent of $25,000 each, in character. At the same time suits have been brought by the same parties against Messrs. Rowse and Bond, as compilers and publishers of the list. At the present moment our list of pending libel suits is as follows: Madame Cora James, $20,000; Frank, Blair, $100,000, Edward Brooks, $25,000; T. A. Larkin, $25,000; J. O'Neil, $25,000; P. A. Berthold, $25,000; total nominal value so far, $220,000. Of the lot, the case of Madame Cora James is, perhaps, the most meritorious, but that is a matter for juries to settle. If her chance in perhaps, the most mentorious, but that is a matter for juries to settle. If her chance in the pool, nominal value, $20,000, would sell in the market for ten cents, it is worth in our private opinion more than all the rest put together.

Hops.—Our last advices from the Eng-Hors.—Our last advices from the English markets state that the crop was then in progress of picking, and was estimated at less than two-thirds of last year. Kents are quoted at £8 8s. to £10 10s., Sussex at £8. The growth in England is put down at 100,000 to 140,000 bales below the consumption; this deficiency must be made up from tion; this deficiency must be made up from stocks on hand and from importations. Nurnberg (Germany) advices of September 18th report "a fair crop as to quantity; the 18th report "a fair crop as to quantity; the qualities are turning out not so good as anticipated, on account of wet weather and little sunshine during the month of August. The Bavarians and Bohemians are backward in gathering their crop. Prices will be lower than last year, on account of the chelera, and the large stock of beer on hand; the growth in Germany and France will give a surplus for export at from £5 to £6."

SCARCITY OF LABOR IN ILLINOIS.—The Springfield (Ill.) State Register says: "Our master builders, contractors and boss mechanics of all classes of business are comchapics of all classes of business are com-plaining bitterly of the scarcity of labor of all kinds. Laborers' pay in this city is now $2 per day; stone cutters and masons, $4 25; plasterers, $4 50; carpenters and painters, $3 50; and these prices, large as they seem, do not secure enough labor to carry on the work already begun. The various public improvements, the water works, sewerage and post-office building, are all delayed in construction from this cause, and as Spring-field offers the same, wages as other points. field offers the same wages as other points, there appears to be no other remedy for the inconvenience, but to wait patiently until time brings relief."

CONCERNING PINS.—Fifteen millions of pins are said to be daily called for in Engand, in which two thousand seven hundred and twenty-seven pounds of brass wire is consumed. Some idea of the consumption of brass wire in the manufacture of pins may be gathered from the fact that one firm in Birmingham consumes one hundred and fifty tons per annum, or three hundred and thirty-six thousand pounds.
