TELEGRAPH FAC-SIMILES,-Mr. Field has brought out to this country a number of very interesting specimens of the system of very interesting specimens of the system of telegraphing now in operation between Paris and Lyons, and Paris and Bordeaux, by which exact copies of the message are produced at either extremity of the lines, solely by mechanical means. The message is written on prepared paper covered with a lead-colored surface, which is a non-conductor of the electric fluid. The writing or drawing in the interest. fluid. The writing, or drawing, in the ink furnished for the purpose, changes the points touched by it to the opposite electrical character. The pendulum is swinging at each end of the circuit in unison. Its upper end is divided into points, say, like a fine tooth comb. The message being passed over these at one end, sends a current to correspond with the writing or lines, and produces an exact copy of the original upon the prepared paper held to the vibrating pendulum in the distant city. Thus a facsimile of writing and signature is furnished without any skill of the operator. A drawing of the likeness of a thief er absonding clerk is reproduced with minute faithfulfluid. The writing, or drawing, in the ink clerk is reproduced with minute faithful-ness. Patterns of machinery, patterns for bonnets, hieroglyphics, messages in Chi-ness, or in an unknown tongue, are copied with as little trouble as the simplest letters of a familiar alphabet. Some notices of this have been given in foreign journals, but no mere verbal description can convey a full idea of the wonderful process. The Hibernian who insisted, some years ago, that the trigraph operator should forward his photograph over the wires to his sweetheart was only a little sheed of his gay. was only a little ahead of his age.—Journal
