Heavy Robbery—860,000 in Government Bonds Stolen. [From the Newark Advertiser of yesterday.] One of the most extensive robberies ever perpetrated in this city, occurred last night at the office of the Mechanics' Fire Insuat the office of the Mechanics' Fire Insurance Co., No. 279 Broad street, their safe having been broken open and $60,000 in government bonds stolen. The thieves probably obtained access through a rear window, which was found standing open, although some believe that the front door was opened by false keys, and the thieves left by the rear windows, as the fastening upon it was not broken and no marks of forcing it open appear upon the sash. The safe, which is appear upon the sash. The safe, which is one of Herring's, was in a recess in the front office with a small closet adjoining, and had been used for fifteen years.

Last evening it was closed as usual, the stolen property being locked up in the in-side apartment. The outside lock was then side apartment. The outside lock was then fastened, and a strong bar across both doors with a heavy padlock was made secure. Upon he opening of the office this morning the adlock was found upon the floor, the bar was lowered, the lock of the safe had been picked open and the door stood partially ajar. The door of the inside apartment had been forced open with a jimmy ment had been forced open with a jimmy, which, with a hammer, was lying on the floor, and the property was then within the burglars' reach. The knob of the handle of the door had been broken off, and the indi-cations were that the thieves had hung up a curtain at the entrance of the recess, so as to prevent their light being seen and to to prevent their light being seen and to deaden the sound.

The property was principally $1,000 bonds of the 5-20 and 7-30 series. Lists of the numbers have been prepared and forwarded to the authorities at Washington, and also to brokers in New York and ether places.

The only clue that has been obtained to the thieves is that two suspicious characters were in the office a day or two since and were in the office a day or two since, and were observed looking attentively at the were observed looking attendively at the safe and two men were seen to go in there at about night o'clock last night. The de-tectives of this city and New York will be at once placed upon the alert and every effort made to secure the robbers.

A reward of $10,000 has been offered by the company for the detection of the thieves and recovery of the property. Strasburg Cathedral. Strasburg Cathedral.

[Foreign Correspondence Pittsburgh Despatch.]

Our first visit in Strasburg was to the cathedral, which is justly admired as being one of the noblest specimens of Gothic architecture extant. This magnificent edifice dates back to the thirteenth century, and presents a most grand and imposing appearance. Its entire length is 525 feet, and breadth 195 feet. The middle nave is ninety-five feet in height, and the spire, the highest in the world, befing 474 feet above the cathedral floor, or and the spire, the highest in the world, being 474 feet above the cathedral floor, or twenty-five feet higher than the pyramid of Cheops, and over one hundred feet higher than St. Paul's, London. Visitors are allowed, on payment of a small fee, to ascend the tower to a platform some 250 feet above the pavement, from which a fine view of the city and its surroundings may be obtained. Some go even to the top of the of the city and its surroundings may be obtained. Some go even to the top of the spire, but the ascent is attended with great risks, and we should neither undertake it ourselves nor recommend others to do so. The façade of the church is very grand and imposing, the massive walls being almost hidden by the arcades, pillars and statues innumerable which decorate it; but the interior is rather plain and in a great measure devoid of ornament. The stained glass windows are very rich, and the organ is said to be one of the largest and finest in Europe, but we cannot say how far this may be true. The greatest curiosity in the church, perhaps, is the celebrated astrochurch, perhaps, is the celebrated astronomical clock, constructed by Schwilgue in 1842, which may be said to be a complete astronomical almanes, from which residence in the construction of the construction astronomical almanac, from which you can read the revolutions of the heavenly bodies and the various phenomena which they exhibit. We heard it strike at 4 P. M. on the

and the various phenomena which they exhibit. We heard it strike at 4 P. M. on the occasion of our visit, and were so struck with the wonderful ingenuity displayed in its construction, that our party visited the church at noon next day, to have a better opportunity of observing its movements. The face of the clock is divided into galleries, on the first of which two genii strike the quarters on a bell which each holds in his hand. Higher up is a skeleton, representing Death, who strikes the hour of twelve, and around this figure are figures representing the four ages of life; and which strike the quarter, Youth the second, Manhood the third, and Old Age the last. Under the first quarter, Youth the second, Manhood the third, and Old Age the last. Under the first gallery the symbolic deity of each day of the week steps out of a niche—Apollo on Sunday, Diana on Monday, and so on, In the highest niche the twelve Apostles move (at noon only) around a figure of the Saviour, bowing as they pass, while, perched on a pinnacle near by, is the effigy of a cock which flaps its wings, stretches its neck, and crows three times, imitating nature so closely, both in voice and action, that one can hardly help believing that the figure is not in reality a veritable, living rooster. Horace Greeley on the Issues of our Great War.

Hon Horace Greeley addressed an audience in Ninth Congregational Church, Williamsburg, N.Y., Wednesday night, on "The liamsburg, N.Y., Wednesday night, on "The Issues of Our Great War." The church was filled by a highly intelligent audience, comprising many ladies. Mr. Greeley spoke at considerable length, his remarks being received with evident satisfaction. He said: We have had a great and terrible war, and it behooves us to apprehend what are the issues of that war. War is sent to nations to teach them truths they will not otherwise learn, as pestilence is sent upon us to teach us sanitary measures. War upon us to teach us sanitary measures. War upon us to teach us sanitary measures. War is a necessity for the settlement of great questions which will ever arise among people entertaining different ideas. Our fore lathers thought that they had provided against wars in this country, but when a portion of our people repudiated the laws made for their guidance, war became necessary. One of the lessons of our war, I might say of all wars, is the peril of undue national expansion.

might say of all wars, is the peril of undue national expansion.

Speaking of sectionalism, Mr. Greeley said: Sectional antipathy was a farce, so far, at least, as the North was concerned. I didn't like human slavery, but did I necessarily hate the country where it existed? I repudiate the idea that the people of any one section of this country hated the inhabitants of another section simply heavens there repudiate the idea that the people of any one section of this country hated the inhabitants of another section, simply because they were residents of such section. We hated and do hate certain things which we find in different sections, but not the section itself. The term sectional antipathy was a fraud. The most determined abolitionists we have ever had or who have ever written upon the subject were men or women of Southern birth and breeding. Mr. Helper was a North Carolinian, and I could mention other equally prominent writers of Southern birth. It is untrue that the North abolished slavery because the climate was uncongenial. It was the moral sense of the community which was uncongenial. The public sentiment at the North would not consent to human bondage. Had it been otherwise, we should have found in our midst hundreds of people who would have found the system of slavery exceedingly congenial to them. There was no sectional feeling against the South, but there was a moral sentiment of hostility to her institution of slavery, there was an impending orisis between the two people which made war a necessity. There were those who thought that slavery could be gradually weeded out, and proposed that laws should be enacted providing for the emancipation of the slaves after the lapse of a certain number of years." But the South would not consent to any plan. The fact is, slavery was a partnership concern between the North and South, and whatever of reproach attached to it was shared equally by both partners. To be sure we held and worked the slaves at the South, but the profits and they were not worked the slaves at the south, but the profits, and they were not small, were re-alized by the North,

It was the attempted expansion of slave territory that precipitated war upon us.

The acquisition by the slave power of Louisiana was a great gain to slavery and a great wrong perpetrated upon the North. This was a great error—that State should have come to us free, and slavery would then speedily have died. We tried to stone for this error when Missouri applied for admission to the Union, but we were unable to succeed. Slavery planted itself upon her soil, and said, "Get me out, if you can." Texas was another instance of the evils of national expansion. That State was also acquired by the glave power and milisted. national expansion. That State was also acquired by the slave power, and militated against the North. This was felt by the North, and when Kansas and Nebraska applied to enter the Union, the Yankee felt that he had been overreached, and the struggle which occurred there was a necessity. The slave-holder held that as an American citizen he had a right to take his slaves into any territory over which the flag of his country. tory over which the flag of his country waved. We did not object to his taking his waved. We did not object to his taking his slaves there if he chose, but we did object to his selling them after he got there. The speaker said that Mr. Lincoln was elected by Southern contrivance for the express by Southern contrivance for the express purpose of affording them an excuse for dissolving the Union. They had worked years for some excuse, and having worked up the Southern sentiment to the proper pitch, the leaders resolved that the election of Mr. Lincoln should be the pretext for secession. Having so resolved, they worked to secure his election and succeeded. Then came secession, This was never popular at the South. The majority of the Southern people were dragooned into secession by the minority. We tried to avoid a civil war, and Kentucky proposed a Convention, but the South refused to submit to arbitration. They demanded all Southern States and some of the Western ones for Slavery. But some of the Western ones for Slavery. But this demand was resisted, and then the South declared for war—that is, the leaders did, but the majority of the people were not in favor of it. Concession on our part would have been the sapping of the foundations of Benyblican institutions. have been the sapping of the foundations of Republican institutions. Then was the severest test of the purity of our people and our idea. Had we yielded, I imagine that the people would have benceforth repudiated all elections as of no use, inasmuch as the South was permitted to govern, and we should have drifted into anarchy. The South having gained so much in the Territories would have gradually usurped the Northern States, and we should have had the whole country given up to slavery. From this fate the bravery of our soldiers and our people preserved us. The war then was directly a contest between Liberty and directly a contest between Liberty and Slavery. The freedom of the slaves necessarily followed our success. The Emancipation Proclamation was but the proclaiming of an established fact. Slavery had struck at the life of the nation, and consequently

A STORY OF 1787.

AN INDIAN TALKOF FRONTIER LIFE.

It has been the aim of the author of this work to present a picture of a particular time and place. Most of the incidents narrated have been handed down by tradition as veritable facts; and the principal personages it troduced are drawn from actual protstypes.

And even in those parts which are more purely imatinary, it is believed that no historical probability has been violated. For all artistic purposes, whatever might be true is true; and this book is presented to the public as a faithful picture of Saratoga in 1787.

Complete in one large Duodecimo Volume.

Price $1 50 in Paper: or $2 50 in Cloth.
