Maximilian to be Assisted by France to [Parls (Oct. 19.) Correspondence of the Independence.

Relge.!

It is on the 30th inst: that the six transports intended to bring back the French soldiers from Mexico will put to sea. I learn that Gen. Castelnau, who lately proceeded to Mexico, has the most extended powers to place the Emperor Maximilian in a position to abdicate if he cannot maintain himself and fulfil his engagements toward France. Moreover, it is asserted that the Cabinets of the Tulleries and of Washington are not far from an understanding as to the claims of France on behalf of such of her subjects as have their material interests affected; and on this point, to influence the Government that may succeed the Emperor Maximilian, American diplomacy holds more, if possible, to the restoration of the republican form in Mexico than to the evacuation of the country by the French army, and shows itself disposed, once that this object shall have been attained, to lend France its assistance.

Maximilian's Determination.

[Paris (Oct. 22) Correspondence of the London Daily News.]

The France mentions the arrival of a let-The France mentions the arrival of a letter from the Emperor Maximilian to an important political personage here, in which he repeats his firm resolution not to abandon the post to which the suffrages of the Mexican people have called him. He is convinced that by limiting to the country around Mexico the area of his dominions he can resist the attacks of the various parties, which already quarrel among themselves which already quarrel among themselves for the power they have not yet in their hands. He does not doubt that he will be supported by the Conservatives, who are interested in keeping what they have, and by the Liberals, whom he has loaded with favors. the Liberats, whom he has loaded what havers. This last paragraph, if it be sincered does not show the knowledge of human nature which the Archduke Maximilian used to have credit for. Most of this evening's papers, in printing the telegram announcing that the Austrian man-of-war Elizabeth has been ordered to Mexico, follow it by a paragraph explaining that the sad news of the Empress's illness will probably cause a change in the Emperor's view of his duty. The Independance of to-day an-nounces that General Castelnau received innounces that General Casteinau received instructions to urge the necessity of abdicating. The unanimity with which the papers of this evening append, one and all, the same comment to the telegram seems to show that they have had a hint to this effect.

The Princess Charlotte.

A Brussels telegram of the 23d says:

"A semi-official contradiction is given to the rumor that the Queen of the Belgians would proceed to Miramar to visit the Fm.

The Memorial Diplomatique of Oct. 20 publishes the following: "Several foreign journals persist in attri-buting the malady of the Empress Charlotte to her interviews with the Holy Father, and the Europe of Frankfort adds a recital of cerchain amily incidents relative to a pretended clause in the will of the late King Leopold, which, according to that journal had subjected the Empress of Mexico to a tutelary council for the management of her patrime council for the management of her patrimo-nial fortune. As regards the interviews of the Empress with the sovereign Pontiff we are in a position to affirm that nothing in the attitude or language of the Holy Father was of a nature to cause a painful impression on the august visitor, who was the object of the mest affectionate interest on the part of His Holiness. As to the pretended testa-mentary clause on the part of King Leo-pold, we are also able to assert that it does not exist; and we may point out that no law gives to the testator the right to attach any limitation whatever to the legitimate portion of each of his children. It is only on the disposable portion that he could place any reserve; and in the present case nobody is ignorant that that portion was

The same journal adds:
"At the last moment we receive news from Miramar to the effect that the doctors in attendance on Her Majesty hope that the malady, will only have a temporary character without any gravity, and will soon yield to repose and regular treatment."

[From the Vienna Presse, Oct. 18.]

We have received from Miramar the following information respecting the state of the Empress Charlotte: It was an error to announce that her condition had become announce that her condition had become worse, and that she could no longer recognize some members of her suite. She has certainly improved a little. The former maitre-d'hôtel of the Emperor and Empress at Miramar, named Relinka,did not accompany them when they left for Mexico. He established on the Treste road an eating house, which is much frequented. The Empress called upon him and his wife, who is a native of Vienna and manages the is a native of Vienna, and manages the cooking department, and begged of them to send ner food prepared by themselves, because she had no confidence in her Mexican servants, who wished to polson her. The Empress added: "I am, in fact, now hun-

THE ROMAN QUESTION.

French Report of the Political Situation in the Eternal City.

[Rome, Oct. 22, cor. of Paris Debats.] In view of the great events which are being prepared, a tacit accord seems to have been arrived at between the government. being, prepared, a tacit accord seems to have been arrived at between the government and the people. The latter are borne down by misery. They suffer from the dearness of provisions, from the rarity of specie and the absence of foreign visitors, but they are pesuaded that this state is only transitory. Patience may be fairly said to be one of the virtues of the Romans. The government is conscious of its unpopularity and weakness. It is aware that the old machine is at each moment in danger of ceasing to work. No one here doubts that a more or less radical alteration in the political institutions is about to take place. The Romans are awaiting that change with confidence; the lower clergy without too much fear, and the cardinals with terror. The Liberals do nothing to hasten the crisis, because they know the result is sure; and the clergy take no steps to prevent it, because they feel that they have no power to do so. No shade of jealousy is mingled with the satisfaction felt by the Romans on seeing the enfranchisement of their brothers of Venetia. "To day is their turn?" they seeing the enfranchisement of their brothers of Venetia. "To-day is their turn," they say, "to-morrow will be ours, for the unification of Italy will not be really accomplished until the possession of Rome shall crown the edifice."

The monetary difficulty is becoming daily

more serious, and the credit of the Roman Bank does not recover. Its notes now lose 15 per cent., and the guarantee given by the State has been of no assistance. The new Pontifical coinage being current in Italy, he money is exported by degrees as it is ssued to pay for the daily supply of articles of consumption received by Rome from the neighboring provinces. Thence the ne-easity of having recourse to the expedient-of creating half scudo notes, which will be accepted with repugnance, but of which the need is felt for the facility of business. Several cases of cholera are said to have occurred at Rome, and the fact appears po-

The population does not, however, manifest any great fear. The amusements of the month of October are going on, although sometimes interrupted by the uncertain state of the weather. A great lottery, to be paid in copper money, was to be drawn a few days back, but has been postponed. The legion from Antibes was received coolly at Viterbo, but no quarrel has taken place between the soldiers and the inhabitants. That happy result is due to the National Committee, which made every effort to calm the agitation of the population.

Sterling Comfort for the Pope from America.

[Berlin, (Oct. 20) correspondence of London Times.] It really seems as though the events of the summer had been too momentous to allow of the autumn becoming what it usually is—the dead season. About a week ago General Montebello, the French com-mandant at Rome, received formal orders mandant at Rome, received formal orders from headquarters touching the evacuation of the Holy City. At the same time, the Pope was promised the more than diplomatic assistance of Spain in case of desertion by France and, moreover, heard the gladdening intelligence from America that the loan which Messrs. Blunt and Rasen have been raising for him in the United States is all but subscribed.

The Late Charles A. Heckscher, The numerous Philadelphia friends of the late Charles A: Heckscher, who died in New York, on Tuesday last, will be interested in the following sketch of his life, which we find in the Miners' Journal:

Few men were better known in Schuyl-kill county than Mr. Charles A. Heckscher, kill county than Mr. Charles A. Heckscher, whose sudden death in New York city, on Tuesday, we record as above. He has been identified with the mining of anthracite coal since 1835, and more coal has been mined and shipped by him, than by any other person connected with the trade.

Mr. Heckscher was born in Paris, in August, 1806, and after having received a liberal and complete business education, began life. and complete business education, began life at an early age in the counting-house. He was not born to be a clerk, and in a few years found his way to the United States. His talents and genial manners soon made him friends in his new home in New York, where he became the leading partner in a large and successful commission house. His acquaintance in Europe, and the facility with which he spoke and wrote the English, French and German languages, gave him advantages of which he did not fail to avail himself.

But he was not destined to remain long in mercantile pursuits. As early as 1829 the anticipated completion of the canal along the Schuylkill river gave an impetus to investment in coal lands, and a number of gentlemen in New York purchased a large body of lands on Mine Hill and Sharp Mountain, from which they anticipated large profits but these anticipations (as had large profits, but these anticipations (as had frequently happened in coal operations) were not realized. The canal was not finished in time, and the company's money was soon expended, as they expected returns in a few months which they did not have been provided to receive for years. turns in a few months which they did not receive for years. By assessments and borrowing money they managed to keep out of danger until 1827 when the company by mortgaging their property to a capitalist of N. York, succeeded in raising $65,000. For a few years interest was paid punctually, but the coal trade was not profitable, and the stockholders eventually became tired of paying out while nothing was coming in. The creditor, when he found that he had to take the security for his debt, consulted young Heckscher in 1834, who went at once to the Heckscher in 1834, who went at once to the coal region. On his return he expressed the opinion, that the debt was safe by proper management. At that early day he predicted the future of the anthracite coal trade, and his faith in the value of coal lands was unbounded. In a few years he lands was unbounded. In a few years he began a trial of that faith by becoming interested in coal property, and eventually gave up all other business to develop coal ness energies to producing coal, and from 1839 until 1865, when he withdrew from active business, he or the firm of which he was the head, have been the largest individual operators in the coal region. During this period he experienced many vicisaitudes, and has often for months at a time last wanny on every top of soal coal to tudes, and has often for months at a time lost money on every ton of coal sent to market, but he never failed to meet every obligation he incurred. The men employed by him have never been without their wages on pay day, and every debt contracted for materials, &c., has been paid at maturity.

The management of such interests throughout periods of prosperity and depression have, of course, taxed Mr. Heckscher's energies to their utmost extent, but he has always found time for the cultivation he has always found time for the cultivation of social relations and indulging in litera-ture. Few men who make no pretensions to scholarship were better read or could make better use of their information at all proper times and places, than Mr. Heck-scher. Added to this he had an ease of manner and readiness of expression which made him a most charming companion. He was not, however, a man who followed fashion implicity, or sought for popularity.

Since that time he has devoted his busi-

He had a circle of intimate friends to whom he was sincerely attached and they reci-procated his feeling. In this circle and around his family fireside, his sudden death has created a vacancy that can never he filled During the last summer he has been suffering from an affection of the stomach, which lately he and his friends thought had been cured, and for ten days preceding his death, he seemed to be much better. On Tuesday he was at his office as usual, leaving late in the afternoon. In the evening he was attacked by violent spasms, and died about 8 P. M.
