CITY BULLETIN.

MAN STABBED .- Roschel V. Melano and Bartholomew Bennell were before Alderman Jones, this morning, upon the charge of assault and battery with intent to kill. The accused are Italians, and are aged respectively fifteen and eighteen years. spectively fifteen and eighteen years. They are traveling musicians, one playing the violin and the other the harp. Last evening, about six o'clock, they stopped in a tavern near the west end of Market Street Bridge. The proprietor requested them to leave, and they did so. As they went out a young man named McNamara, who was considerably intoxicated, followed them. He got into a quarret with them, and finally attacked one of the worths. of the youths. As he did so the other drew a knife and stabbed McNamara twice. One wound is in the side, and the other in the stomach. Neither are considered dangerous, but McNamara is confined to his house, at Twenty-first and Locust streets. The defendants were committed in default of $1,000 bail for a further hearing.

HEAVY ROBBERY.-Mr. Thomas Smyth HEAVY ROBBERY.—Mr. Thomas Smyth is the proprietor of a tavern and a cigar shop adjoining, on South street, below Juniper. Tast evening the premises of Mr. Smyth were entered by prying open, with a jimmy, the trap door on the flat in the top of the house. The thief completely ransacked the upper part of the building, and every bureau drawer was opened with a false key. In the second story back room, in the lower part of a wash stand was a small box. This contained U. S. bonds to the value of about $2000, two gold watches, and a gold ring. $2,000, two gold watches, and a gold ring, upon which the name of Mr. Smyth was inscribed. The box was forced open and all the valuables were extracted. At the time the robbery was committed Mr. Smyth was in the bar room, and Mrs. S. was in the upper story of the house with her child.

A COLD SNAP.—The atmosphere, during the past forty-eight hours, has been exceedingly chilly, and heavy overcoats and shawls do not feel at all uncomfortable. The mercury now ranges among the thirties. Early this morning the air was very cutting, and those who were out appeared with red noses, and almost everybody got along on a sort of a dog trot.

THE SKATING PARKS.—At most of the skating parks about the city, workmen are now engaged in getting things in order for the coming winter. In some of them extensive improvements are to be made. From present indications those fond of skating will have an exceedingly good time during next winter.

INTERFERING WITH AN OFFICER.-Peter Lout was arrested last night, in the Fif-teenth Ward, for interfering with Officer Keim. It is also alleged that he attempted to rescue a prisoner who was in custody of Keim. He was committed by Alderman Hutchinson.

ASSAULTING A RAILWAY CONDUCTOR .-Albert Fricker was before Aid. Fitch this morning upon the charge of assault and cattery. It is alleged that he beat a conductor on the Girard Avenue Railroad, and also disfigured the outside of the car. He was held for a further hearing.

DISORDERLY HOUSE CASE.—A young woman named Grace Carroll was arrested yes-terday and taken before Alderman Fitch upon the charge of keeping a disorderly house at No. 2217 Sharswood street. She was held in $1,000 bail for trial. GOUGH ON TEMPERANCE.—Thousands of warm admirers of Mr. John B. Gough will be glad to hear that he lectures on his favor-ite topic, Temperance, at the Academy of Music to-night. A few seats may yet be MEDICINAL WATERS.—Messrs. Bullock &

Crenshaw, Sixth and Arch streets, announce that they will hereafter keep on hand a sup-ply of Congress, Empire and Columbia Spring Waters, They will be sold at the Ice.—During last night ice was formed in the gutters in the city, and this morning rural sections were covered with a thin coating of ice. THE CHOLERA.—There was but one case of cholera reported at the office of the Board of Health to day. This is the only case reported during the past three days. New Jersey Matters. A GRAND REPUBLICAN MEETING.-The campaign in the Second Congressional District of New Jersey was closed last evening by a monster meeting at Medford. A grand torchlight procession took place before the meeting, and a fine drum corps was in at-tendance during the evening. An eloquent and elaborate argument in behalf of the radical ticket was made by Lewis Ashmead, Esq., of Philadelphia, who was ably followed by Hon. Samuel Read, and W. P. H. Covert, Esq. The meeting adjourned with confident intention of re-electing Congressman Newell.

REPUBLICAN MEETING IN CAMDEN.—
One of the most brilliant meetings of the canvass was held in Camden last night.
Hon. Robert Folwell was President, with Wm. Abel, Thomas S. Speakman, Harry B. Wilson, Hiram Matthews and Samuel Archer as Vice Presidents. Hon. James M. Scovel spoke for nearly two hours. Hon. Leonard Myers made a witty speech of an hour. Hon. Mr. Custis also spoke. The whole affair was very satisfactory and did great good for the cause.

A Hunter Shot by a Deer.

[From the London Telegraph, Oct. 17.]
Devoted as the English race is to field sports, and general as the pursuit of them has grown, the shooting season can never mass without accident. pass without accidents. Most of these however distressing, are ordinary enough in character. Forgetting obvious rules of caution, inexperienced or careless hands main or kill either themselves or some of maim or kill either themselves or some of their companions. There is nothing to be said of such disasters, except that prudent sportsmen should avoid the clumsy people who cause such risks, and that those persons themselves should try to remember that he who lets any eye but that of his quarry see down his loaded barrel is a muff and a homicide in posse. But in Scotland a calemity has befulen a first in Scotland a calamity has befallen a first-rate and well-tried forester which is really one of the most extraordinary ever told in the annals of the rifle. There are curious stories by dozens in the records of "flood and field." Every book of hunting and and field." Every book of hunting and shooting contains some wonderful tale, and every old shot can spin yarn after yarn of "wild adventures that befell." Some that are not believed are none the less true, for travelers and hunters do "strange things," as well as "see" them, and are often shy of narrating all they know, because truth is so often less probable than fiction.

Who would credit, for example, that a wild Australian bull, in full charge, had been felled to the ground and slain by a pebble thrown from the hand. Yet that is on record. And in the long list of the accipebble thrown from the hand. Yet that is on record. And in the long list of the accidents that have befallen the disciples of St. Hubert we find the oddest of tales. It is Harris, we believe, who narrates in his "Highlands of Ethiopia" that a dying antelope pushed into the pursuer the hunting-knife which was drawn to slay it, well-nigh "gralloching" the man instead of suffering that process itself. Something of the same character, but more extraordinary still, is the unfortunate accident which has occurred in Mar Forest. It is not very uncommon for in Mar Forest. It is not very uncommon for deer to kill their hunters. The brow antiers deer to kill their hunters. The brow antiers of a "stag of ten" are like bayonets, and the old song says, "If thou be hurt with horn of hart it brings thee to thy grave." But who ever heard of a stag shooting the man who shot it? Nobody would dare to invent such an incident in a volume of sport. The mighty hunter who got the solviquet of Gordon Cumming-"it-too-strong" never told us such a story as that. Yet the thing has really happened this year in the Grampians, and a right good forester was buried among the mountains last Wednesday, who was shot through the heart by a bullet fired by a stag of which he had made sure, and which was itself at the point of death.

The unlucky sportsman was named Geo.

The unlucky sportsman was named Geo. Urquhart, and was a first-rate and successful deerstalker, one of the best of Mr. Powell's foresters at Braemar. When out with his master and some others on the face of Cairntoul, a fine stag was stalked and surrounded by the party. Urquhart was sent to keep the animal from escaping by the head of the glen, and, firing at it, he wounded it again. Another forester then joined him, and the two followed the stag out of the main pass into a very deep glen, with broken ground and precipitous sides, and a foaming burn below. The deer was so badly hurt that the men came up with him; and Urquhart tried to drive him down so badly hurt that the men came up with him; and Urquhart tried to drive him down with the butt end of the rifle, before dealing the finishing blow. In despair and pain the stag lashed out, and striking the hammers of the piece, knocked one off and brought the other down on the cap, so that the charge exploded and drove the bullet straight through the forester's body. He stood for a moment, and then said, quietly, "I am shot," and fell into the arms of his companion Grant, who laid him down and stood for a moment, and then said, quietly, "I am shot," and fell into the arms of his companion Grant, who laid him down and tried to stop the bleeding. Seeing the poor fellow was so much hurt, Grant hastened up the glen, and found his master, with the others wondering what had become of the two men.—On hearing the melancholy news Mr. Powell and his friends immediately went down to Urquhart, while his comrade ran over the hills to a shieling, seven or eight ruiles off for further assistance, and thence sent to Braemar, sixteen miles further, for doctors. But the forester was as fatally hit as the stag, which had dropped dead a little way below; and although he could tell how the accident happened when his master first came up, by and by he grew weaker and weaker, and died as the twilight began to fall. At about 7 o'clock the men came back, and placing the body on a hill pony, they carried it out of the pass. By this time the darkness was so dense that in the wildness and desolation the mournful party utterly lost their way. At midnight they were obliged to lay the corpse on the heather, and sit down to wait for morning, but just on stopping they saw the fire in the shieling to which Urquhart had first gone, and then the lanterns of the men sent out to look for them. So at last they got abelter. The doctors had also come, but the deer stalker was long past their help—dead and cold like his slayer, the antiered king of the fills which lay in the wild mountain burn. The stag had positively shot the forester with his own rifle the andered king of the Hins which key in the wild mountain burn. The stag had positively shot the forester with his own rifle in its dying agony, avenging the death of many a "heart of grease," and its own fate
