

WOULD I Do you think I'd a baby That I'd let him out to sea? Do you think I'd put on collars Just to let him soil and tear? Do you think I'd call it pretty When he has his teeth on me? Yet I have known some silly mothers, With their babies, do just so.

THE EVENING STAR DISASTER. Investigation by the Treasury Department—More Stringent Laws Needed for the Government of Our Merchant Marine.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9, 1866.—Captain W. M. New, in command of the steamboat Evening Star, was directed to examine into the case of the disaster to the steamer Evening Star on the 2d inst. ... The testimony of J. A. Raynor, expert Superintendent of the New York Steamship Company, to which the vessel belonged, and also that of her builders, show that she was built in 1853, the specifications with the contractors calling for a first-class steamship, was built of good material and was apparently in a most substantial manner.

limited crew. In conclusion, Captain New says: "The loss of the ship is not without its appropriate lesson to ship owners, and in the absence of any laws affecting the subject I sincerely trust that their attention will be directed to the necessity which exists for the more complete manning, equipping and furnishing of the American marine generally, to the end that the same may be elevated to that point of pre-eminence above that of all other nations to which it is invited by the unequalled resources of the country—a degree of positive security of life at sea; and that the probability or possibility of the loss of life in ordinary voyages may be reduced to a minimum, and which some of the larger companies furnish exceptions by the care shown in the equipment of their ships. As to the necessity of legislation on this subject, it is none the less certain that the enactment of stringent laws governing our merchant marine is an absolute necessity. I therefore respectfully call your attention to this matter, in the hope that radical changes in the existing laws may be suggested to Congress."

COAL IN KANSAS.—The Leavenworth Times says that "coal has at length been found on the Government Reserve in Kansas. The vein was struck at a depth of five hundred and eighty feet. At first it was supposed to be nothing but slate, but after going through the vein, which is three feet thick, the drill was withdrawn and the clippings pumped up, when it proved to be superior to the Lexington coal."
