Around this lovely valley rise The purple hills of Paradise.

Ob, softly on you banks of haze Her rosy face Summer lays! Becalmed along the azure sky,

The argosies of cloudland lie,
Whose shores, with many a shining rift,
Far-off their pearl-white peaks uplift. Through all the long midsummer day. The meadow sides are sweet with hay. I seek the coolest sheltered seat, Just where the field and forest meet Where grow the pine trees tall and bland.

The ancient oaks, austere and grand,
And fringy roots and peobles fret
The ripples of the rivulet. I watch the mowers, as they go Through the tall grass, a white-sleeved row; With even strokes their scythes they swing, In tune their merry whetstones ring; Behind the nimble youngsters run, And toss the thick swaths in the sun; The cattle graze—while, warm and still, Slopes the broad pasture, basks the hill, i bright, when summer breezes break, And green wheat crinkles like a lake.

The butterfly and bumble-bee Come to the pleasant woods with me; Quickly before me runs the quail— The chickens skulk behind the rail,
High up the lone wood-pigeon sits,
And the woodpecker pecks and filts,
Sweet woodland music sinks and swells, The brooklet rings its tinkling bells, The swarming insects drone and hum The partridge beats his throbbing drum, The squirrel leaps among the boughs, And chatters in his leafy house. The oriole flashes by, and look! Into the mirror of the brook, Where the vain blue-bird trims his coat. Two tiny feathers fall and float.

As silently, as tenderly, The cawn of peace descends on me: Oh, this is peace! I have no need Of friend to talk, of book to read; A dear Companion here abides— Close to my thrilling heart He hides; The holy silence is his voice; I lie and listen, and rejoice.

The Great West-Nebraska. Mr. B. F. Taylor writes to the Chicago

Three hundred and thirty-five thousand, eight hundred and eighty-two square miles of the earth's surface are called "Nebraska." They comprise what was left of the Louisiana purchase after carving out Arkansas, Iowa, Missouri and Minnesota; about the largest exchange of real estate ever contem-plated, if we except Satan's proposition to the Saviour, when from the mountain top he offered him the kingdoms of the world for a consideration. If you should pack England and Ireland in some corner of its area, almost two-thirds of Nebraska would yet be wilderness; and all their clustering English islands, the Shetlands and Orkneys, Man, Wight and the Hebrides, ranged down its cen-tre in a row, would look like buttons on a waistcoat.

And the contour of this magnificent territory is readily indicated; beginning at the river and gradually receding and rising, you have an edge of Missouri meadow; a narrow shelf of prairie; low hills and ridges, fringed with timber along the seams and around the ankles, like an Indians leggings; bluffs growing moderately ambitious, until at last, the genuine prairie, starting out from the top of the bluffs, rolls away in swells five hundred and forty miles to the broken regions where the world begins to stand up, and to be called Rocky Mountains. It is a land without a lake, and with no thing approaching the dignity of a mountain but the Black Hills. But no matter; the land that gave birth to the Missouri can owe the world nothing. Let me paint you a picture if I can.

Standing anywhere on the table-land, at the foot of Black Bird bluff, in Decatur, you face eastward. Across the river stand the woods, the rude veneering of Iowa. The jets of steam from the mill show against the trees, as small and white as the plume of Henry of Navarre. Just opposite you the Iowa shore does what Iowans never did-retreat; the river makes a great bend and comes about as if it had some notion of not leaving Nebraska at all. You can see the chimney-tips of a steamer just over the trees, looking like a couple of hats. It is ten miles off by water, and only four across the meadow and through the corn. At this distance it moves as silent "as a painted ship upon a painted ocean." The smoke dots the horizon all along, just over the woods, like those little fleeces when the enemy discloses his batteries. Pretty soon the steamer slips round the wooded point into view, white like the rest of its race, and lettered like a sheep upon its side See a thousand tons of grass growing up to the little city's edge. The forest of corn standing in solid columns; the encampment of huge cones of grain, the yellow wigwams of the harvest.

See those human heads drifting about over the tops of the grass, as if they all wore Mercury's caps and so had wings. Those heads have owners, and the owners are in the saddle! Hear the tinkle of a bell, but the wearer is invisible. A cow in that meadow is as insignificant as a rabbit. A carriage and horses growl across a little bridge. You get a fair view of them, and in an instant, with a twinkling of wheels they are gone. It is as if a woodchuck had stumbled into his burrow. And the grass has no trace of humanity; it is as wild as the hawk that dropped down into it a minute ago. Yonder goes the stage from Sioux City, bound for Omaha, sixty miles down the river. It is a red wooden box, something like a menagerle cage, with two seats inside vis-a-vis; and no room without for anything but "W.S. C."—Western Stage Company. It is one of the later glories of the country, and the immediate successor, two little months ago, of a "buck-board," which is nothing more than a long teeter upon four wheels -and on that festive board, three times a week, came news from Eastern homes. No paper every day, damp from the press to open silently like a flower, no quick touch of telegraph to make you kin in a second to anybody dear and far away. But the railroad will find them, and the harp of a single string will be played for them, and distancing all the world behind them, the dwellers here upon the right bank of the Missouri will read of eyents in New York an hour and twenty minutes before they happen.

PETROLEUM FOR STEAMBOATS,—Petro-leum is to be used as a steamboat fuel. A company has been organized in Memphis, Tennessee, which is building a boat of not less than fifty-horse power, that will save one-third of the space devoted to fuel, while its lightness will greatly lessen the draft of the vessel.

The mission of Hon. Lewis D. Campbell, accompanied by Gen. Sherman, to Mexico, reminds us of a similar one in 1858-9. The parties were then Hon. Robt. M. McLane, of Maryland, and Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, his brother-in-law. Gen. Johnston, then belonging to the old army, was sent out with Mr. Mc. Lane to examine into the military condition of the country. The United States were at that time in as much of a fog concerning Mexican affairs as they are at the present. Mr. McLane had a carte blanche, we believe, to huntup a de facto government, or to enter into diplomatic relations with that which had the matic relations with that which had been strongest hold upon life; in other words, that which promised best in the interest of order and the United States, Gen. Johnston was to report upon the military situation. Everything looked fair the Liberal Government and Juarez. for the Liberal Government and Juarez, though Miramon was then ruling at the city of Mexico till the diplomatic party arrived at Vera Cruz, when, lo! they found themselves be-sieged in the Heroic City and Miramon's mortars planted on the sand hills beyond the plain in a semicircle around it. All there was of the Liberal Government was shut up within the walls of the city, and the shells were every now and then bursting over it. The natives had their houses covered with raw hides to save them from conflagration, and the foreign residents were crowded together promiscuously in the several consulates under the protection of their flags, which gave about as much pro-tection as so many dish rags. For two long weeks this lasted, when Miramon having burnt up all his powder mounted his mortars and went back to the capital, like a crawfish, backwards, as the Very Cruz humorous papers of the day represented him Thoron the day represented him. There upon Mr. McLane recognized the Jaarez Government, which is, we believe, the beginning of our relations with it, of which General Sheridan writes to Gen. Sedgwick. And what better could he do? He could not get out of the city to go up into the country any further, for Miramon's forces still kept him shut up therein. He therefore, recognized the only Government he could find, and on the appointed day, in grand procession, all the Americans in Vera Cruz went in swallow tailed coats and white kid gloves to the City Hall, which had been metamorphosed into a government house for the occasion, to see Mr. Mc Lane deliver his credentials, and listen to Juarez's welcome in return. It was a grand occasion as anybody can imagine who knows anything of Mexican character and customs. Minister Campbell and Gen. Sherman start out for Mexico under very similar circumstances, thereby realizing the prophet's saying, that "there is nothing new under the sun," at least in Mexican affairs. They will not go to Vera Cruz, however; that city is held for Maximilian. They will go round through New Mexico, and edge or sidle in by way of Santa Fe. They will probably find Juarez somewhere up in the mountains of Chihuahus, with imperial troops surrounding bein, very much as Miramon surrounded him at Vera Cruz. That should not daunt them, however. Miramon, in Mr. McLane's time, finally went down, and Juarez went up, though only to go down again. These or similar events may yet repeat themselves with the "hearty support" of the United States. We give Juarez, at all events. the benefit of the doubt. In the meantime, Gen. Sherman can profitably em-ploy himself in exploring the northern States of Mexico, Sonora, Sinaloa, Lower California and even Chihushua, for according to the telegraphic reports, a good slice of this country is soon to belong to the United States. The population is not worth much, but the country is rich in silver mines, and will be of inestimable value to the United States

when they resume specie payment. A Wonderful Land with Stone Trees Six Hundred Feet Long. In the Eastern Slope newspaper we find a report of many of the curiosities and the great riches of the Black Rock country in the northwestern portion of California. The reports of the singular features of that section are of many years' standing, but are so marvelous that they have seldom obtained credence. Among the wonderful stories we have heard is one that there is a petrified tree there seven hundred feet in length! The present report in part confirms previous statements, and estab-lishes the fact that Black Rock is one of the wonders of the Pacific coast, like the Yosemite, the Big Trees, the Geysers, etc. Besides the curiosisities there appears to be an abundance of silver at Black Rock, but the ore is said to be of an unusual variety and very difficult to work; but it has been worked with very good results at the mills at Washoe. The quantity of ore is so great that it is said it will jussify the erection of a thousand mills. A gentleman who visited the section has exhibited to the editor of the East-ern Slope very many natural curiosities peculiar to the country, strange petrifactions from the ravines, curious waterworn pebbles from the mountain tops; knives, arrow-heads and daggers manufactured by Indian skill from solid flint. a superior quality, apparently, of ore block tin, said to contain six hundred dollars in silver to the ton; pebble tin, with its curious fracture, that admits no change of form, and a thousand strange and new things. The editor says: He also tells us of many strange things that he saw but could not bring with him, and many stranger things he heard of but did not see.

Among the latter list of wonders is a says that he is an arrest had a patrified. great basin that contains a petrified forest, apparently floated there, many vast trees of solid stone, ranging from six to fifteen feet in diameter. Doubtful as this tale may appear, shall we dare to dispute its correctness when we know this strange country nas a boiling spring of fresh water, fifteen feet in diameter, that cannot be sounded, from which no drop of water ever runs; that in the same vicinity there is a flowing stream of cold and apparently good water, the drinking of which induces venereal disease, and that any water found by digging is as salt as salt can make it; that a half dollar deposited in the soil is eaten up by the salt, and after thirty

The Chiesgo Tunnel Scares for the Work-A recent letter from Chicago states that for two on three days reports had been in circulation throughout the city of the caving in and bursting of the lake tunnel, the drowning of the workmen, &c. Investigation, however, proved that nothing serious had happened, although the workmen have had two or $\tilde{O}\tilde{\text{LIVES FARCIES, CAPERS, &c.-Olives Farcies} and French Olives; fresh goods, landing ex Napoleon though the workmen have had two or $\tilde{O}\t &c. three bad "scares." The ground in which the excavation is now progres-sing has not been of the uniform consing has not been of the uniform consistency heretofore shown. Every now and again gas jets hiss in the face of the workmen, blow out their lights, &c, and and small pockets" of sand are opened, which bring to the minds of the miners the thought that perhaps there are larger ones sufficiently large to admit the waters upon them. As may be imagined, the thoughts of the may be imagined, the thoughts of the men are not of the pleasantest kind, and it does not take much to startle them, and produce a panic. On Saturday morning, about 2 o'clock, after a stroke of the pick, a blast from the bowels of the earth extinguished the lights, a mass of earth fell from above, the water rushed in in a considerable stream, and the cry was raised by the men that the roof of the tunnel had fallen in. A race was made in the dark for the shaft, which being reached, a frantic shout for those stationed above to "rise up!" stationed above to "rise up" was given, and very shortly the men were lifted to the surface. The terrified miners then proceeded to the house of the city engineer; and informed him that the tunnel was destroyed. He at once proceeded to make an exploration, which revealed the fact that a small quantity of water and a mass of earth had fallen from a "pocket," and that was all. The men again pro ceeded to work, after a two hours' inter-ruption. If no accident occurs the tunnel will be completed in about three

SUDDEN GOOD FORTUNE .- On board the United States gunboat Madawaska sometime ago, a young man held the humble position of lamp trimmer. He was a Hungarian, whose father had been executed for participation in Kosauth's revolutionary movement, and he came to the United States in 1848. Knowing but little of the circumstances of his family, and believing all their property to be lost, after earning a precarious livelihood in other ways, he finally en-tered the U. S. Navy as a "landsman," and was employed on the Madawaska to assist the captain of the hold and trim the lamp. Whilst in this position, however, he happened to see a newspaper, which contained [an advertisement, requesting Edward Louis Batthyanyi to communicate with certain parties, and he "would hear of something to his advantage." This being his own name, he lost no time in complying, and after proving his identity, was informed that his father's title and estates had descended to him, and that he was a Hungarian Count, with an income of at least $50,000 a year, a large remittance of money being sent at the same time for his support. Being metamorphosed into a nobleman he deserted from the gunboat and went to Washington to get the Austrian Minister to solicit his formal discharge from the service, preparatory to his return to Hungary. The mere reading of a small newspaper advertise-ment sent this man his rare good fortune.

THE HARRISON BOILER A SAFE STEAM

THOLER.—

This new Steam Generator combines essential advantages it also the property from the property of the little of cleaning and transportation, not possessed by any other boiler.

It is formed of a combination of cast-iron hollow spheres—each eight inches in external diameter, and three eighths of an inch thick, connected by curved necks, and rebate machine made joints, heid together by wrought-iron boits with caps at the ends. The form is the strongest known: its strength to resist internal pressure very great—unweakened as it is by panching or riveting, which lessens the strength of the wrought-iron boiler plate about forty per cent. Nevery boiler is tested by hedrantic pressure at appounds to the square-inch. It cannot be burst under any briters, every joint in this becomes a saidty valve. No other steam generator possesses this property of relief under extreme pressure without injury to itself, and thus preventing disease.
