cessors are; but it is reasonable to assume The cunning pen of Mr. Seward will that they are of the Copperhead tribe be detected in the extract from a letter addressed by "a member of the cabinet that are having most of the Federal offito a friend of the Administration in ces of the country distributed among them. The President and his satellites New England," which appears in toare rapidly educating the people up to day's naper. It is meant to smooth the the point of demanding of Congress to use the power confided in it by the constitution, and deprive Andrew Johnson of the ability of shamefully misusing an authority confided to him. The sovereign remedy for many of the evils with which a bad man is afflicting the country, is a deprivation of the power of making appointments.

way for a reconciliation between the President and Congress. It sets out, however, with a mis-statement, in declaring that "few men seem to be less understood than President Johnson." This might have been said a year and a half ago; but now, few men are better understood. His "strong convictions and earnest purposes" would be respected, if there were any truth or consistency in them. But the convictions expressed two years and more ago are totally opposite to those expressed now. and the "earnest purposes" then expressed to punish traitors and make treason odious, are now superseded by earnest purposes to pardon traitors and make loyalty odious.

Notwithstanding all that has occurred and the terrible condemnation which the people have given of Mr. Johnson's policy, we are condescendingly told by Mr. Seward that he "will violate no law, nor fail to perform the duties that are legally devolved upon him." This is so much beyond what has been expected of him, that the people should be grateful at being spared the trouble and annoyance of an impeachment. They should thank Mr. Seward, also, for the assurance that the President does not propose a coup d'état, or to do anything to disturb the public peace or derange the public credit; as, also, for the assurance that he would, under certain circumstances, yield much to affect a reconciliation with Congress. But, after all, the diplomatic letter of the Secretary of State is a very weak and lame apology for the President, and it might as well not have been written. Congress and the people are masters of the situation.

THE NATIONAL UNION PARTY. The result of the late elections has had the effect of discouraging the Copperhead leaders in their hope of again making their party a power in the land with the aid of Johnsonism. The overwhelming rebuke administered through the ballotbox has convinced them of the hopelessness of their efforts at party reconstruction. and it has taught them how to appreciate "the hybrid concern now floating upon the sea of public contempt into which it sometime since entered, and from which no power can rescue it." as the Democratic Chicago Times styles Johnsonism. Criminations and recriminations are now indulged in between Copperhead orators and newspaper organs, and the few cowboys of Republicans who have followed Andrew Johnson in the pursuit of bread and butter. The hopelessness of the effort to drive Congress from the stand it has taken has caused the abandonment of every pretence of principle in the question, and a grand scramble for place is in progress, with the usual accompaniment of wrangling and squabbling among the scram- thorns and that thistles shall be called blers, As to Andrew Johnson, he thistles. That is all.

Since the foregoing was in type we have learned that Mr. Griffy, a night inspector, who lost an arm in the service of the country, was also removed yesterday. The removal of three one-armed men from one department of the Custom House, in the same day, is doing enough towards making loyalty odious, to please even Andrew Johnson.

A GRAVE EBBOR.

The Charleston News takes very seriously to heart the fact that the extraordinary honors paid to the rebel dead in the South excite comment in the North and lead to inferences that are not favorable to a speedy restoration of the forfeited rights of foiled traitors. The News grows warm in its praises of de parted Southern heroes, and urges with much force the propriety, decency and humanity of doing honor to their ashes. But it falls into the grave error of supposing that the North objects to these displays of profound respect for the memory of dead rebels, and that it would compel Southern men and women to conceal their real feelings and stifle their natural emotions. No sensible man in the North expects anything so unreasonable, or demands anything that would be so impossible of accomplishment. The North expects to see homage done to the memory of fallen soldiers in the rebel cause, because the faith of the survivors in that cause remains unchanged, and it also expects to see the present generation of Southerners entertain the same feeling of hatred of free institutions and of genuine republicanism that prompted the leaders of the rebellion to make war upon the government which they lived under. The North expects all this, and it is not unreasonable enough to look for impossibilities south of Mason and Dixon's line. The North does not ask the South to refrain from bedecking the graves of dead rebels with flowers, nor would it have it conceal its honest sentiments. What the North does object to most decidedly and unequivocally is the restoration of defeated rebels to the share in the government which they have forfeited, until they show better signs of contrition and amendment than a constant reiteration of the right of secession, and repeated posthumous honors to the men who fell in the support of a bad cause. The North does not expect to "gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles." It only desires that thorns be known as
