EVENING BULLETIN. THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1866.

THE FIREMEN AND THE AUTHORITIES. A portion of the companies comprising the Fire Department are already making an active, organized effort to defeat the proposed reformation of the system of managing the department. This reform, in brief, proposes to put the immethe hands of a Commission to be formed in the manner which we have already described; by making the Chief Engineer elective by City Councils, and by giving the Commission power to suspend er remove either the Chief or his assistants for what they may deem sufficient cause. Our Fire Department, as at prezent managed-except in the number of men forming it, and in the completeness of the apparatus in use—is scarcely an improvement upon the primitive condition of things, when on the occasion of a conflagration, every able-bodied citizen sallied forth with his leather bucket, and each working "upon his own hook," threw water directly upon the flames, or supplied the engines, and did just as he individually pleased After the city had become more widespread and populous, fire companies were formed. As these companies were at first composed of the best citizens, their work was accomplished for many years without the need of any general organization being felt. In time, however, the zeal of some of the younger members out-ran their discretion; emulation ripened into fierce rivalry, rivalries bred dissensions, dissensions were followed by disgraceful riots, and the better class of firemen deserting their companies by scores, irresponsible, and, too frequently, vicious men, got the upper hand in the department. Various plans were from time to time devised as cures for the evils which grew out of the irresponsible volunteer system, the and within three hours after the sale was virtual control being always left in the hands of the firemen themselves. We had Boards of Control, Boards of Directors, Committees of the Fire Association, and many other expedients which we have forgotten, until the present en- extraordinary result was mainly attrigineer system was adopted. How this butable to the great success of the Batehas operated, the newspaper reports of man Troupe last week, and the consewell- wishers of the firemen, will best ans wer. Disgraceful rioting has been t o frequent; incendiarism for the sake of a "run," a fight or the "christening" of a new apparatus, is notorious; the unchecked destruction of property by water, long after small fires had been extinguished, has been frequent and scandalous; fires have been allowed to get headway while rival companies squabbled over plugs, or allowed them to lie idle while they scrambled for additional attachments, and last, and most disgraceful of all, shameless robberies have been committed in endangered property, by scoundrels who assumed to be firemen. We do not bring this as a bill of indictment against the mass of the fire department, which we know to be composed in the main of brave, gallant and generous men; we only enumerate these serious grievances of the citizens at large, by way of showing that the firemen are now, as they have been in the past, unble to correct these abuses in their own department, and that a reform in which is necessary. Cincinnati, Baltimore and New York labored under all the evils of a Volunteer Fire Department, in which a few bad men nullified the best exertions of the many good ones, until the lawful authorities made a clean sweep of the difficulty by abolishing the volunteer system in toto in each of the cities named. Paid Fire Departments were then established, which have proved cheaper and more efficient than the old no-system, without counting the benefit accruing to public morals.

some more powerful agency will be felt

Philadelphia pays directly out of the treasury about one hundred and twenty thousand dollars a year for the compensation of engineers that it cannot control, and for the maintenance of companies and apparatus that are as independent in their action as though they were self-supporting, and with carte blanche to do precisely as they please at a season of disaster, when perfect order and strict discipline are pre-eminently important. How much private citizens may pay towards the support of the department, in the way of levies and contributions, no man can tell; but the annual aggre gate is very heavy. The public is wearying of this, and it demands that it shall control what it pays so dearly for the support of. It is unwilling longer to suffer under the evils of an unrestrained and irresponsible volunteer system, while bearing, directly or indirectly, the expense of a most onerous paid department.

We say it in no spirit of unkindness to the genuine firemen, for we are well aware that they generally concede the | pondent. difficulties which we have pointed out; but we nevertheless say it in all earnest ness and candor, that the old irresponsible fire system has outlived its usefulness; that it has utterly failed to keep pace with the necessities of the times, and that its members must consent to be controlled, as all other citizens are controlled, by law and the legally constituted authorities, or stand aside and make way for a department, no member of which will deny the authority of the representatives of the citizens who appoint, control and pay him for his services.

AMUSEMENT SPECULATORS. The business of speculating in tickets

of admission to places of public amusement may not be either immoral or illegal, but it is so very unpopular that all managers of public entertainments strive to prevent it by all means in their power. A concert or opera ticket is perhaps as legitimate an article of sale as any other token of value, but it is very provoking, after standing en queue for two or three hours to secure reserved seats at some popular entertainment, to find that they have all been gobbled up diate control of the Fire Department in | by speculators, who will accommodate the disappointed public at some moderate advance of fifty per cent. or so upon the advertised prices. There are some considerations, however, for the consolation of the public, of practical and philosophical nature. If the speculation referred to is an evil, it is a comfort to know that it is unavoidable. There is no plan yet discovered which can confine the sale of admissions to public entertainments to those who intend themselves to use them "First come, first served" seems to be the only fair principle in this matter, and if the earliest birds catch more worms than they require for their own breakfasts, there seems to be no sound reason why they should not open a market for those who prefer to breakfast somewhat later. The impossibility of controlling this branch of speculating is so fully recognized in New York, that ticket offices have been established whose proprietors regularly purchase a fourth or half of a house at a small advance on the advertised prices, and the pleasure-seeking community regard the additional price paid for their seats as no more than a fair compensation for being saved the time and trouble of going or sending to the theatre, opera house or concert hall to secure their seats.

In the case of the "Stabat Mater" performance of next Friday night, we imagine that there was very little of this speculation carried on. The legitimate demand for seats was unprecedented, 603 and 605 Chestnut Street. commenced on Saturday last, nearly a week before the performance, every eligible seat was gone, and yet every precaution was taken to make the distribution as impartial as possible. This the past few years, the police returns, | quent eagerness to hear these fine artists and the evidence of the most earnest again. In a city as large as Philadelphia, with the rapidly growing taste for good musical entertainments, it must often happen that there will be more applicants than can be accommodated, and whenever this is the case there will be a certain amount of speculation in tickets. All that can be asked of agents and managers is that that they will make the best arrangements they can to give the public at large the fairest possible chance to secure comfortable seats, and beyond this it becomes a question—well, not to put too fine a point on it, unfavorable to the hindmost.

THE SUSQUEHANNA BRIDGE, The opening of the new bridge across the Susquehanna at Havre de Grace is an event worthy of special note. Yesterday a locomotive passed over the bridge, and on Monday next the regular trains to and from Baltimore are to begin to use it. This superb bridge, nearly two-thirds of a mile in length, is a perfect triumph of engineering skill and of the energy and enterprise of the Company. Commenced in 1861, the work of its construction has been steadily pushed forward, and millions had been expended upon it, when it was almost totally wrecked by the tornado of July 25, 1866. Scarcely a vestige of the eastern end of the bridge was left, except the massive piers themselves; but its reconstruction has been prosecuted with such amazing energy that now, after the lapse of only four months since the disaster, it is completed and ready for travel. The opening of the bridge will, of course, do away with the delay and trouble of transporting the trains by boat, and will shorten the route between Philadelphia and Baltimore at least half an hour, besides avoiding the risk of obstructions from ice in winter.

NO MORE DEMOCRATS TO OFFICE. The Washington correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser says, under date of yesterday: "No more Democrats are now being appointed to office, with the exception of Gen. Slocum, who appears to have been booked for the New York Naval position." The Washington correspondent of the EVENING BULLETIN telegraphed as follows on the same day: "Secretary McCulloch has sent to the President the name of Joe Severns as Surveyor of the Port of Philadelphia. This ettles the matter." The appointment of this sound Republican to this lucrative place is strong evidence of the correctness of the Commercialman's statement. "Joe" Severns, in his active connection with the old Evening Argus, with Col. Thomas B. Florence's Constitutional Union, and with several other newspapers of a like kidney, proved the earnestness of Mr. Severn's republicanism and the entire reliability of the Commercial's corres-
