EVENING BULLETIN.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1866.

TRIPLE-SHEET BULLETIN. The BULLETIN of to-morrow will be a triple-sheet, of seventy-two columns. Among other interesting original matter it will contain a sketch of the famous "Old Slate Roof House," and also of the New Corn Exchange Building, with accurate cuts of both structures. It will be filled with news and literary matter of the freshest and most attractive character.

DEBBY. The Tory party of England, under the Readership of the Earl of Derby, was, during the four years of our civil war, openly hostile to the United States government. That party, on every convenient occasion, sought to embarrass, if not defeat, the Palmerston and Russell Ministries by motions for the recognition of the "Confederate States of America." It was then the best card they had to play, and in both houses of Parliament they played it with zeal and perseverance, though happily without success. Sympathy for the pro-slavery oligarchy and a desire for the permanent destruction of the Union were openly avowed by the Earl of Derby and his partisans, and it was not till after the complete triumph of the Union arms that they desisted from open expressions of hos-

Since July last, however, the Tories, or Conservatives, have held the government of Great Britain, with the Earl of Derby as Prime Minister. His tone has wonderfully changed, and he has taken advantage of every opportunity to try and counteract his past unfriendly sayings. The last occasion was on the 9th of November, at the Ministerial Banquet given by the new Lord Mayor of London. Only a few sentences of his Lordship's speech have been telegraphed, but he is reported to have said that "he could not but believe that the great and powerful nation in America would speedily know how to quell the agitation would be settled in a satisfactory man-

When was the Earl of Derby honest and sincere? In 1862,1863 and 1864, when, as the leader of a party out of power, he showed hatred of the United States, and openly desired their destruction? Or in 1866, when, as Prime Minister, with the American Government stronger than ever,he condescended to patronize it with his praise? The answer is, neither at the one time nor the other. He can trim his sails to suit the weather, as all skilful politicians can do. He acted as a partisan leader during the war, and he is acting as one now. It is the duty of his Ministry to settle for the outrages of the Alabama and other Anglo-rebel cruisers, and he wants to make us feel as kindlydisposed as possible. He and his countrymen have acquired a wholesome knowledge of the power of the United States, and especially of the superiority of our navy. It is very pretty to say that the laying of the Atlantic cable proves Great Britain still to be"mistress of the seas:" but it is not true. America s mistress of the seas, by her unrivalled ron-clad fleet and the magnificent swift cruisers that the war compelled her to create. With an energetic and wise administration of our foreign affairs. Great Britain can be brought to our feet and made to ask us to name our own terms about the Alabama and similar claims. It is clever in the Earl of Derby to pretend to such warm love for us. But such affection for us can easily be seen through. It may amuse, and perhaps deceive, our optimist Secretary of State; but if he is deluded by it into abating one jot of our just claims, he and his superior in office will be held to a strict account by the people of the United States.

THE COUNTERFEITER'S FRIEND. In ancient times, when Hon. Thomas B. Florence represented "ye fierce Democracie" of the First District, that rotund gentleman was wont to proclaim himself to his admiring audiences as "The Widow's Friend and the Boatbuilder's Son." The consequence was that there was not a widow nor a boatbuilder in the district that was not his sworn friend, and that did not vote early and often for him upon all occasions, so far as the widows were allowed to do so. Mr. Florence has long resided in Washington and enjoys peculiarly pleasant and intimate relations with His Excellency, Andrew Johnson. Thomas is not ungrateful for the hospitalities of the White House and the confidences of the Chief Magistrate, and he has evidently instilled into his mind those astute principles which proved so potent for his own advancement. Mr. Johnson has been flinging himself about in various directions with indifferent success. He flung himself on the Democracy, but the Democracy soon had enough of him and bade him "move on." He flung himself on the country, and the country promptly repudiated him. He flung himself on the Constitution, and it rolled over on him, threatening to grind him to powder. He flung himself on the office-holders, and his bribes were flung back in his face. But he has one good card yet. He turns to the penitentiary and the States' prison and throws himself upon the convicted rogues who have been retired from society for society's good, and proclaims himself "The Original Alderman and the Counterfeiter's Friend." Here he meets with no rebuff. His overtures are promptly accepted. His chosen alies and beneficiaries are active energetic and faithful to their friends, and he doubtless persuades himself as one did of old: "When I am put out of my stewardship, they may receive me into their houses." We have already recorded a long list of these pardoned counterfeiters that have been turned loose upon society by Mr. Johnson, and now we have the report of two more of these convicts released from their confinement, before their terms of punishment are half served out. This proclivity of the President's for pardoning one of the worst crimes known to society seems to amount to a sort of monomania, and constitutes an abuse of executive power, which imperatively demands some sort of a

There was an occurrence on Wednesday in the United States District Court, in this city, worth noticing in this connection. William Cregar, one of the most notorious and successful counterfeiters in America, was arraigned on two bills of indictment, to both of which he plead guilty. He has recently served out a fiveyears' term, but on a previous wellremembered occasion, when Mr. Wm. B. Reed was District Attorney, Cregar played his cards so successfully, that, while his inferior dupes and tools were convicted, their principal slipped easily through Mr. Reed's fingers and went scot free. Cregar had money, friends and influence, which he well knew how to use, and the ease with which he escaped conviction was such as to attract even the notice and elicit the comments of Judge Kelley, then upon the bench. But now he makes no concealment of his crime and does not attempt to evade conviction. He finds it easier and cheaper to plead guilty, and will doubtless receive the sentence of the court with comfortable indifference. He well knows that Judge Cadwalader will sentence, but that President Johnson will pardon and that, with far less cost and trouble than it required to slip through the fingers of Mr. Reed, his prison-doors will soon fly open at the arbitrary mandate which at present existed within it, and of the great "Counterfeiter's Friend." that peace would reign from one end of Cregar's plea of "guilty" convicts Mr. its shores to the other." He also gave Johnson almost as directly and posian intimation that the Alabama claims tively as it does himself.

THE NEXT CONGRESS.

As the Congress which meets on the 5th of December expires on the 4th of March, much anxiety has been expressed with regard to the long recess that must intervene before the assem_ bling of the Fortieth Congress in December of next year. With the total loss of confidence in the President, on the part of the people and their representatives, this long interval of apparently unrestricted power might be regarded with well-grounded apprehensions, were it not that the Constitution, with wonderful foresight, has provided for the emergency. Article I. Section 4, declares that "The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year; and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day." Under existing circumstances, there can be no hesitation about passing this constitutional law, and thus convening the Congress immediately upon adjournment of the old the With this safe-guard and the one. additional precaution of removing the appointing power from the President, as provided for in Art, II, Section 2 of the Constitution, he will have very little remaining power for mischief. These two important matters will doubtless occupy the early attention of Congress, and indeed may well claim precedence of Mr. Phillips's demand to "throw reconstruction and the constitutional amendment out of the window, and proceed with the business of impeachment at once."

VOTING FOR JACKSON. There is a well-founded tradition that the Democracy of Berks county have adhered so steadfastly to their ancient devotion to the hero of New Or'eans, that they still vote for At irew Jackson at all elections in that enlightened section of the State. An incident which occurred within a few days goes far to confirm the old tradition. Our popular fellow-townsman, Daniel Dougherty, Esq., recently made a visit to the country-seat of a friend in Berks county. A large portion of a day was spent in driving, and during the drive, "Dan," as usual, made himself the life of the party, with his inexhaustible flow of anecdote and witty conversation. In the evening, the coachman, a sturdy native of Berks, was overheard unburdening himself of his day's experiences to a confidential companion. "He's a wonderful man," said he, "I never heard the like. He talked longer than anybody I ever saw. They all called him 'Dan.' Is he Dan Webster?"
