AN INTERESTING SCENE, -The boys of the Lincoln Institution, orphans of Pennsylvania soldiers, paid a visit this morning to Governor Curtin, at the Continental Hotel. The boys, about seventy in number, marched from their Home, regularly offiered and uniformed. and attracted much attention by their neat appearance and admirable behavior.

admirable Denavior. Governor Curtin received his little visitors in Parlor C. A short address was made to him by the Orderly Sergeant of the school, expressing the gratitude of the soldiers' orphans to him for his efforts in their behalf. orphans to him for his efforts in their behalf. The Governor responded in a speech marked by a simplicity admirably adapted to the comprehension of his youthful audience, and by a fervent and patriotic interest in their future welfare and pros-perity. He gave the boys much sound and judicious advice, and urged upon them the cultivation of the same love of their the cultivation of the same love of their country which led their fathers to die in its behalf. He reminded his older audience which had been attracted to the scene, that each of these boys "represented a dead sol-dier," and he declared that the one legacy which he desired to leave to his successor which he desired to leave to his successor in office was the care and education of these "Children of the Commonwealth," Mr. Francis Wells briefly responded to the Governor's remarks, on behalf of the Lincoln Institution, and paid a justly-merited compliment to Governor Curtin for his great public services during the past six years, but especially for the system which be had established for the support of these orphans of Pennsylvania soldiers. At the conclusion of his remarks the little fellows gave three hearty cheers for Governor Cargave three hearty cheers for Governor Cur-tin and filed out, saluting the Governor as they passed him. The whole scene was one of extreme interest to the spectators, and the fine appearance of the boys and their excel-lent and soldierly behavior, was the best possible tribute to the capacity and the faithfulness of the ladies who have this ad-minuble Institution in charge mirable Institution in charge.

RATHER MIXED.-Yesterday afternoon. two men went into a shoe store on Market street, near the bridge. One of them pur-chased a pair of boots and threw down a $20 bill to pay for them.
