THE LATE REV. DB. BRAINERD. Eloquent Eulogy by Rev. Alfred Barnes.

Yesterday afternoon, Rev. Alfred Barne delivered a memorial discourse on the late Rev. Dr. Brainerd, at the church in which the latter had so faithfully labored for thirty years. The text was:

Daniel xii. 2, 3: "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake—and they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteens as the stars for ever and ever." They shine as stars here, constituting bright constellations shedding ther radiance upon the earth. They are removed at death to shine in other spheres and worlds: shedding a brighter radiance there. To human view they seem to go out and become extinct, as when a star in the sky seems to burn out and to pass away forever. Those stars may pass away. The power that created them, and that made them so bright and beautiful, can as easily annihilate them, and beaming and beautiful as they are, they may have accomplished their purpose and may have ceased to be. They are material and may pave ceased to be. They are material and may perish. But it is not so with mind; bright, beaming, illustrious mind. That does not die. It is removed to other worlds; it does not die. It leaves the coath indeed, it to withdrawn from human earth, indeed; it is withdrawn from human view; but it is transferred to other realms to shine with undimmed and increasing lustre

There is a difference in the brightness of those minds, both here and in the world above, as there is a difference in the brightabove, as there is a difference in the bright-ness of the heavenly bodies. "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory." One star dinereth from anomers ar in giory.

I Cor. xv. 41. Those "stars" that God removes from earth to other spheres, shine with different brightness here, and will shine with different brightness forever. All that are "wise" shall shine indeed, as the brightness of the firmament.

The Rev. Thomas Brainerd was born in Leyden, in Lewis county, in the State of New York, on the 17th of June, 1804. He be-longed to the family of Brainerds rendered illustrious by the life and labors of David Brainerd, Missionary to the Indians; a name known and honored in other lands as well as in our own.

In respect to his own earlier training, I cannot be wrong in supposing that his account, in his life of John Brainerd, of the ordinary course of training in the family of the Brainerds, in accordance with the gene ral course of family discipline in New England, was derived from what occurred substantially in his own father's house. At any rate, his own subsequent character and life can be best explained on the supposition that this was the kind of training under which he was reared. As the account is itself instructive; as it may be presumed that it expressed his own views on the sub ject of the discipline of a family; and as such it cannot but be useful to bring it before this congregation in this form, at this time, I will copy a portion of the description.
"We had enforced on us, in early life with too little effect, we fear, many of the principles which formed the characters of David and John Brainerd one hundred and ifty years ago.

"A boy was early taught a profound respect for his parents, teachers and guardians, and implicit, prompt obedience. If he undertook to rebel his will was broken by persistent and adequate punishment. He was accustomed, every morning and evening, to bow at the family altar; and the Bible was his ordinary reading book in school. He was never allowed to close his eyes in sleep without prayer on his pillow.

"At a sufficient age no caprice; slight illness, nor any condition of roads or weather, was allowed to detain him from church. In the sanctuary he was required to be grave, strictly attentive, and able, on his return, at least to give the text. From sun-down, Saturday evening, until the Sabbath sunset, the sports were all suspended, and all secular reading laid aside, while the Bible secular reading laid aside, while the Bible. New England Primer, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, Baxter's Saints' Rest, &c., were commended to his ready attention and cheerfully pored over.

"He was taught that his blessings were abundant and undeserved, his evils relative few and merited, and that he was not only bound to contentment, but gratifude. He was taught that time was a talent to be always improved; that industry was a car-dinal virtue, and laziness the worst form of original sin. Hence he must rise early, and make himself useful before he went to school, must be diligent there in study, and be promptly home to do 'chores' at evenfilled up by some service, such as bringing His whole time out of school must be in fuel for the day, cutting potatoes for the sheep, feeding the swine, watering the horses, picking the berries, gathering the vegetables, spooling the yarn, running all errands. He was expected never to be reluctant, and not often tired."

The early purpose of Dr. Brainerd to study law, and his change of purpose resulting in his determination to consecrate his life to the ministry, were vividly sketched.

He was ordained as an Evangelist, in New York, October 7th, 1831, and went immediately to the West as a home missionary. In December of that year he was settled as pastor of the fourth church in Cincinnati, where he labored two years. In March, 1833, he became editor of the Cincinnati Journal, which he conducted, together with the Youth's Magazine, until the autumn of 1836—nearly four years. During that period he assisted the Rev. Dr. Beecher, as a preacher, in the Second Presbyterian Church of that city, an event which laid a founda-tion of mutual confidence and affection for life. In October, 1836, he was called to the pastoral charge of the Third Presbyterian Church, in Philadelphia, where he commenced his labors February 1st, 1837. His pastoral life here embraced a period of just about thirty years—as eventful years in the history of the church and of our country as any that have occurred since we became a nation. The history of those years is fa nation. The history of those years is familiar to you all.

Dr. Brainerd, whether he was conscious of any influences from these sources or not, carried much of all this into his subsequent life, and his style of public speaking was formed much on these models. He would have risen high in the profession between the control of the contr life, and his style of public speaking was formed much on these models. He would have risen high in the profession which he had first chosen. He had been endowed with those talents which we naturally associate with our best efforts at the bar; a deep throwledge of human nature; a quick perknowledge of human nature; a quick per-ception of the point at issue; power of disentangling that from all other points; skill in debate; abundance of illustration and of anecdote: the power of perceiving the weak point of an adversary, and the strong points of his own cause; keenness of sarcasm, and invective if necessary; the power of antici-pating all points of difference of an adverpating all points of difference of an adver-sary; readiness in summoning to his memory-all that he knew, and a power seldom equaled of showing the heniousness of guilt and the evils of a violation of law.

Dr. Brainerd's power eminently was that of a public speaker—a public speaker in regular and set discourses—but, perhaps, more strikingly in debate. His early opportunities of scholarship had not been great, and the state of his health and his abundant public duties and his active life had prevented his greatly enlarging his scholarship. He had, indeed, by reading, by observation, by conversation, stored his mind with a great amount of information on all subjects most impostant. on all subjects most important for him to know, but it did not pertain in any remarkable degree to either scientific or literary subjects. Of information to be derived from the daily press, perhaps no man surpassed him; of information to be derived from observation and a keen sagacity, there were none of his brethren who were his equals. His literary labors were mostly confined, with one exception, which I shall have occasion to notice, to a few sermons have occasion to notice, to a few sermons, to a few articles in our Quarterly Review, and to the newspaper press. To the latter, alike by his taste and by his conviction, that in this way truth could be best promulgated, regulating the public mind and correcting public errors he contributed much, and there are few men, even of those devoted to the newspaper press, that could reach the public in this way in a more timely, spacious and effective manner. As a public speaker, while in the manner. As a public speaker, while in the pulpit and in deliberate bodies, with no particular advantage of manner, but with much arising from his nervous temperament that would seem to promise little, he yet had a power which few men possess. In preaching, he often plunged at once into the middle of his subject, and made most direct and earnest appeals to the reason and the conearnest appeals to the reason and the conscience. In debate he seized at once upon the real point in debate, and pressed that with a power of argument, with a force of language, with an amplitude of illustration, and with a severity of invective and sarcasm, if necessary, which few men have ever exhibited in debate.

Like David Brainerd, and most of his family he was a man subject to degreesing of mily, he was a man subject to depression of spirits; and he apprehended much, as his own father had suffered much in the closing scene of life. He apprehended paralysis, perhaps months or years of helplessness, and at the same time months or years of mortal darkness and depression. From both these he was mercifully preserved. In a moment, almost in the twinkling of an eye, without anything unusual to excite engraphagising or anything unusual to excite apprehension or alarm, without pain, without consciousness, he was taken from earth to heaven. Could the warmest affection for him have ordered he circumstances of his death more merci-

I trust it will not be regarded as inappro priate, in conclusion, to refer, in a word, to my own personal feelings and my own sense of loss, when he was so suddenly taken away. Never before have I so felt that I stood alone on the shores of the great ocean of eternity as I felt then; and why should not the personal friendship of so many years be allowed to utter its feelings in sympathy with a mourning congregation, on an occasion like this?

Why should not the memory of other days come over my soul here? Why should

Why should not the memory of other days come over my soul here? Why should I not unite with you in speaking of the loss which I have sustained as well as you? Why should I not be permitted, while I speak of his public life, also to bear my testimony to him as a warm-hearted, true, generous, sincere and affectionate friend? For an unusual period in human life—for or an unusual period in human life-for thirty years—we were united in such inti-macy and friendship as rarely exists on earth, and is still more rarely prolonged for such a period; for we lived and labored side by side, and took sweet counsel to-gether. We traveled together; we prayed together; we rejoiced together; we mourned together. We had no envies, jealousies, or heart, burnings and there. together. We nad no envies, jeaiousies, or heart-burnings, and there was nothing to be forgiven on either side when he died. We rejoiced each in the success of the other as if it were his own success—for it was success. cess in the cause for which we both lived, and in the advancement of that Master's kingdom which we were both endeavoring to promete. When he was buried I felt as it half of myself was in his coffin, and was committed to that grave—how could I help it? I have younger friends among my brethren, dear to my heart, and securing daily more and more my affections, but you must approach the period when the ominous number "three score and ten" is not re-mote, to understand how a man feels when he friend of thirty years dies, and—such a riend—is committed to the tomb.

*He died at Scranton, Pa., Aug. 21, 1866.
