For fifteen years—indeed, even longer, for the subject was broached at the time of the organization of the Philadelphia, Wilming-on and Baltimore Railroad Company—the or and partition tentron company—ne reject of bridging the Susquehanna river stween Perryville and Havre de Grace is been constantly discussed, not only by ose interested in the great route of transportation between the North and the South, which this achievement is so essential and the south. which this achievement is so essential an aprovement, but also by the public prinals and the scientific men of the whole untry. About four years ago the great ork was actively common the great ork was actively commenced, under the present supervision of Mr. Parker, the risonal supervision of Mr. ramer, the ninent engineer, whose designs for the structure had been approved by the Company. Seconded and slisted in his every effort by Mr. Samuel A Felton, then President of the road, material or means, and material or reash, and the desired Mr.

lowed every latitude he desired. Mr. rker worked on. The liberal manageent of Mr. Felton being not abated by his accessor, Mr. Isaac Hinckley, there has an no drawback on the part of the Comhay to prevent the market in fell mont of by to prevent the perfect fulfillment of the parker's ideas. The bridge had altely approached completion, when by the table tornado of the 25th of the July last, thstructure was torn from its foundations an made a perfect wreck. Far from being district by the disaster, the builder was indired to new energy, and in three months fro the date of its partial destruction it habeen recompleted and made ready for pulc use.

I commemorate this most important eve in the history of the road, the officers, directs and a number of invited guests lefthe depot of the Philadelphia, Wilming ton and Baltimore Railroad, yesterday moring, at nine o'clock, in an excursion trail consisting of five cars, all new, drawn by ce of the company's finest locomotives, whit was gayly decorated with flags, bunting ad flewers.

Th excursionists reached Perryville abouncon, and prior to crossing the bridge the crs were run upon the steamer Mary-landwhich has been so long and so faithfullyised by the company as the steam bridg at that point. Steaming across the stream in such a manner as to give the partym excellent opportunity to examine the wrkmanship of the structure most carefuly, the boat returned to dock, having probaly carried the last train of cars that will eer be run upon her decks at that point. The Maryland has an historic interest. It was upon this boat, on the 20th day of April, 1861, that General Butter, with the 8th Massachusetts infantry, were carried fom Perryville to Annapolis, and thencemarched to Washington, when the communication through Baltimore was in-

On the 19th of April Mr. Felton, President of the road, a gentleman whose loyal devotion to his country and whose exertions inher behalf are known to the whole country, and need no additional comment from us ascertained from reliable sources information that on the ensuing night of information that on the ensuing night the brilges upon his road between the Sus-quehaina and Baltimore, would be burned by the rebels, as would many of those upon the Batimore and Ohio Railroad. At that time there were no troops at hand for the pre-ventior of such a catastrophe, all the availa-ble force being have idealy on the wear to ble forces being hurriedly on the way to the defenceof the national capital. Placing himself in communication with General Butler, wko, with such troops as he had gathered together, was then on his way to Washington, Mr. Felton made known the impracti-cability of through transportation by rail, and proposed to carry the troops by water to Annapolis. This was done, the Maryland being the steamer used for the purpose. The designs of the bridge burners were frustrated, Washington was reached, and the reasibility of the route of communication was established. During the war many thousands of the loyal soldiery of the North were carried in this boat on their way to laurels of victory or honorable graves.

A proposition is now suggested that the faithful old boat should be taken to Balti more, and act there in a similar capacity to that in which her labors have just ceased by transporting the trains from Camden the northern suburb of Baltimore, to Locus Point, there making the connection with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. This would save the infinite annoyance of the transfer through the streets of Baltimore, and would be a measure of economy to the road. Should his plan not be adopted the Maryland will be laid up for such future use as occasion may demand.

After being again transferred to terra firma, the train was passed across the bridge slowly, in order that each one should have an opportunity to judge of the work for himself. The entrances of the bridge at the abuments on both sides of the river were profusely decorated with flags and flowers, evergreens and inscriptions. At the north end of the bridge was written, "Four years' work of a thousand men," followed by the Latin legend, "Labor omnia vincit." Similar appropriate mottoes were inpon the opposite end. Ample time was allowed on the Havre de Grace side of the river for all of the party who felt so disposed to examine the details of the work.

We have already published a full account of the bridge, and shall, therefore, merely make mention of the fact that from abu ment to abutment the distance is very little less than half a mile. There are twelve solid masonry piers in addition to the draw rest and breakwater, for protection from ice jams. Exclusive of the draw, there are thirteen spans of two hundred and fifty fee each, and, throughout, the workmanship is most finished, complete and reliable.

Returning across the bridge, the guests were escorted to a tastefully decorated ban-quet hall, where an excellent collation was served. Among those present we noticed Mr. Samuel M. Felton, late President of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad; Mr. Isaac Hinckley, the present occupant of that office; Mr. Alfred Horner, Treasurer; Messrs. N. W. Thayer, J. I. Bowditch and Edwin Austin, of Boston; J. Brinchurst and I. M. Densent Williams. Bringhurst and J. M. Duncan, of Wilmington; F. A. Curtis, of Newark, Delaware; William Prescott Smith, late of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad; William Woodside, Thomas Gelser, Thomas Whittridge and Enoch Pratt, of Baltimore; Col. M. N. Fall, President of the Bay State line of steamers; Mr. Small, of the Northern Cen-tral; Mr. McComb, of the Pacific Railroad; guished citizens of different sections of the etc., etc. After the conclusion of the dinner, Mr. Hinckley, President of the road, addressed the guests, bidding them welcome and thanking them for their presence. He alluded to the importance of the event celebrated in the history of the road he represented, and stated that the present company occupied probably the last train of cars which would ever be carried across the Susquehanna by the steamer they had just left and certainly they had occupied the first train that had ever crossed the new bridge; they were the first, indeed, who had ever crossed the Susquehanna in cars by any other means than on the boat, except those who had crossed on nature's bridge. [Mr. Hinckley alluded to the fact, which will be remembered by many of our readers, that several years ago for several successive weeks the trains were run regularly across the river upon tracks laid upon the ice.

Rep.]
Mr. Hinckley said it was not his purpose Mr. Hinckley said it was not his purpose to describe the bridge or its history, and he referred in a eulogistic manner to Mr. Parker, the engineer of the work. [Applause.] Alluding to the fact that but one hundred days had elapsed since the tornado of July, yet the bridge was now open for travel, the President compared this one hundred days work of Mr. Parker to the "hundred days" of Nardison. Mr. Hinckley concluded by work of Mr. Parker to the "hundred days" of Napoleon. Mr. Hinckley concluded by a most just and complimentary allusion to Mr. Feiton, whose name was received with great and continued enthusiasm.

Mr. Feiton expressed his regret that he had not the voice to make proper acknowledgment of the courtesy, and called upon Mr. Isaac Hazlehurst, the counsel of the company, to answer for him.

Mr. Thayer, of Boston followed Mr. Pratt, and spoke for a few moments in a pleasant vein, when the calls for Mr. Parker were so continued that that gentleman was obliged to present himself.

Mr. Parker was received with repeated cheers, his acknowledgment of the call was conched in most appropriate language. He recited briefly the history of the bridge, referred to the great liberality of the Com-pany, and alluded in most complimentary terms to Mr. Edward Larkin, his assistant

Mr. Larkin not being present, his health was proposed by the President. The toast was received with the enthusiasm due to his efforts. The President then proposed: 'The city of Philadelphia and its worthy and in response thereto Messrs. Moore and Nicholls of that city made proper acknowledgments. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was proposed, and the chairman read the following letter from the president of the corlowing letter from the president of the corporation:

PBESIDEAT'S OFFICE, BALTIMOBE AND OHIO BAILBOAD, BALTIMOBE, NOV. 26, 1866.—1866. Isaac Incheley, Eng. DEAR SIB—1 begt to thank you for your invitation to participate in the excursion upon the opening of the railroad bridge across the Susquehanna river. I much regret that important and imperative engagements deprive me of the pleasure of joining you out total interesting occasion. Allow me to tender you my cordial congratulations upon the completion and success of this grand enterprise, which not only serves to connect more closely the cities of Washington and Baltimore, and Palladelphia and New York, but which, periecting a most desirable link upon the great highway for through transportation between the east and the west, the north and the south, is of the highest practical value and of marked national importance. I trust this splendid work will not only repay the vast amount expended upon its construction, but prove an 'enduring monument to the skill of its engineer and of the foreeight, energy, public spirit and enterprise of the managers of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Haitroad Company.

Very respectfully and truly yours

JOHN W. GARRETT, President.

Mr. Benjamin De Ford, of the Baltimore poration:

Mr. Benjamin De Ford, of the Baltimore and Ohio, answered for that corporation.

The "Press of the Country" elicited a response from Mr. Snow, of the Washington sponse from Mr. Snow, of the Washington National Intelligencer.

Brief speeches were also delivered in response to calls therefor, by Mr. Strickland Kneass, of Philadelphia; Professor Porter, of Delaware; Mr. McComb, of the Pacific Railroad; by the President of the Bankers and Brokers' Telegraph Company; by Mr. Bingham, of Adams Express Co., and by saveral other gentlemen.

The occasion was one in every respect leasant. The day was a magnificent one, nd no attention was spared to cause each one of the party to feel his enjoyment to be complete. An interesting fact in connection with the trip was that the officer of the road who had charge of the excursion train—Mr. Jerry Smith—has been a conductor upon the road for 21 years, running, we believe, one of the first, if not the first passenger train ever started by the Company.

An Interesting Case. Boston, Nov. 26th.—At the late term of the United States Circuit Court a case came up for trial on the indictment charging the defendant with selling liquor without naving paid the United States license fee. Mr. Sinnott, the counsel, objected to the adjectment, taking the ground that the United States could not legally take money rom a person for carrying on an unlawful business, and made the query, can the United States as a Government lay a tax pon a criminal business, say for instance, the business of keeping a house of ill-fame, or make a person pay a license for carrying Upon this the Court ordered arguments in writing to be made and submitted, and that having been done, the Judges to-day informed the counsel that they were unable to agree upon any of the questions raised, and, therefore, the case must go to the Supreme Court of the United States upon cerificate of division of opinion.
