NATIONAL HALL.

Interesting Lecture by George S. Bout-Last evening the first lecture of a course Last evening the first recture of a course to be given under the suspices of the Social, Civil and Statistical Association, was delivered at National Hall, by Hon. George S. Boutwell, of Massachusetts, the subject being Policy and justice in public affairs.?!

Among those on the platform we noticed Hon. John A. Bingham, of Onio, and several members elect to our Legislature.

Col. Wm. B. Thomas introduced the dis-Col. Wm. B. Thomas introduced the distinguished lecturer, referring to the trials through which the country had passed, and regretting that some had not been true to the great principles at issue. The gentlehan that he had the honor of introducing was not one of these, as he had always been true to the Union, to truth and to freedom.

Mr. Boutwell was received with great applause, and said his topic was not novel and his plan of treating it would be simple. By justice in public affair he meant that rule of right or equity which men easily comprehended, but could not be stated save in connection with facts. Policy was the action of some men, regardless of right or wrong and any departure from justice led us to believe that no policy at all existed. He had no hesitation in saying that since the downfall of the Stuarts there never was a man at the head of a government so utterly and entirely destitute of all personal qualifications to enter into a just administration of government than was the man who has been in the Presidental chair since April, 1865. Until the Government was put into the hands of a man who enjoys the confidence of the loyal people of this country there would be no permanent peace or safety to the finances, social order, and consequently not a reliable government. After a passing allusion to Mexico he said the British Gevernment had at the earliest moment recognized the rebels as belligerents, and sanctioned the fitting out of the Corsairs that preyed upon our commerce and reduced one-third of our vessels. By that departure from principle and law she reigned victorious for a short time; but now she was but a third-rate govern-ment, and would have to settle for her departure from justice. The delicate subject f interfering in foreign affairs, however, should never be entrusted to persons who had proved themselves treacherous in domestic affairs. When the Government was in safe hards would be plenty of time to hunch all persons from this continent. It slavery was analyzed it would be found to be only a worse form of injustice; and in this connection he narrated an incident of meeting a woman in Washington leaving a slave pen in which was the the last of her daughters, to be sent to Louisiana. That weman and her children were the property of Mr. Blair, the gentleman who is under the weather now; and if he ever had anything to say in his behalf, now was the time to do it. After conversing with the woman he made up his mind never to write a line or utter a sentence in maintenance of sla-very, and, perhaps, he was indebted to Mr. Blair for that resulution

It should be the leading prizciple of every man in this country never to vote for a man for the Executive office who has bought or sold human flesh. This country will never be safe to long as a man is in the Executive chair of the United States who has bought or sold human flesh. The tyrants of the South had no respect for anything but force, and so long as our army was in reach they could be kept in subjection. During the past fifteen months they had felt there was a man at the head of the Government who was not disposed to protect loyal men. If we had, the scenes enacted in New Orleans and Memphis would not now occupy a bloody place on the page of the history of our Government.

our Government.

He was prepared to resist any project except justice was at the foundation; and he believed justice to be where all the people believed justice to be where all the people who come here and give proper evidence that they are going to make their homes here, should enjoy the same equal rights that every white man now enjoys. He was not ready to concede universal amnesty for what is called impartial suffrage. We had no right to make any barters now, for if we needed the colored man on the battle-field, we needed him more now than we did then to go to the ballot-box and restrain the rebels. A man who could read was certainly better qualified to administer the right of franchise, but it did not follow that all should be excluded because they could not read. for it was but an art, the result of education. In Maryland the rebels had possession of the government; and in Arkansas, after th rebels were excluded from voting or holding office by the Legislature, the Supreme Court decided it unconstitutional, and now every rebel votes. In Tennessee, if they are not wise enough to enfranchise the colored man, the rebels will regain that State, and so in West Virginia, and every ancient slave State. It was said these people would vote for their masters if given the ballot. It was said if they were given the musket they would fight for their masters, but did they

These prophecies were idle, as the fact was that the loyal colored man believed in the Government and would vote on the side of the Government. Suppose Maryland had enfranchised the colored man, would day-ernor Swann have had occasion to take ernor Swann have had occasion to take an interest in the registry of the citizens? No: if the loyal, able-bodied male citizens of that State had been permitted to vote they would have taken care of the State. Tennessee could be made to give 50,000 loyal majority, and defy the rebels, by admitting all her citizens to the franchise. It will not do to dole out the reading and writing test, or the whole South will be enrolled against the education of the black man, and there are obstacles enough now to meet with in regard to education, and such a course would gard to education, and such a course would make the twelve States organize as a unit and continue to oppose the Government for-

He came from a State that had sent two black men to the legislature, and whatever might be said of this fact it was simply a matter of taste, and no offence against judg-ment, reason or right. If he found every man had the right to participate in the go-vernment, and any district chose to elect a colored man to Congress, it was no matter of his. It was enough for him to know that a loyal black man was preferable to a rebel white man. If there was not a wise rebet white man. If there was not a wise construction of this Government the colored people would take the matter in their own hands, and while they might be sacrificed it would nevertheless be a disgrace and degradation to the Government that permitted, such things by neglecting to do its duty when it had the right and power so to do.

The Governor of South Carolina complained that the colored people were leave.

plained that the colored people were leaving that State, and yet he did not seem to know that if South Carolina did justice to these people they would stay there. It was unquestionably the duty of Congress to stand firm, and refuse the representatives from the Southern States until they had done justice to the colored people. While he would be happy to see the distinguished gentlemen who represented the South in gentlemen who represented the South in their seats, he did not forget the country had their seats, he did not forget the country had gone along well in their absence, and could continue to go on for five years more if need be. The policy of masterly inactivity would work very well, and secure all that loyal men required. A better plan would be for Congress to take the matter in their own hands, and crush the governments now existing and operating in these ten States, which were organized without authority of law through the agency of rebels, and which have never been sanctioned by Congress.

By legislative authority they should orbit and the secure of th should be recognized at the beginning. Let this be done, and in ten years we will have people who can be safely trusted with heir own affairs, and be represented in the National Congress. The speaker now re-lected to Andrew Johnson, and said if it as reported that he was in conference with alexander H. Stephens, Wade Hampton or Joe Johnson, the people would feel some opprehension. If, however, the lamented Liccoin was in office, and such a confernce would be reported, no apprehension would be felt, for every one knew that whatever concessions he might make, he would rever concessions he might make, he would never concede the substantial rights of the hyal people of the North. The apprehension that is felt concerning Johnson is unded in the fact that the people have lost confidence in him, and he could no longer be trusted in dealing with these men. He as allied with rebels, and the spirits of the South, who look to him as their leader and

Davis during the rebellion.

With reference to the proposed impeach tent of the President, he said if Congress in good faith and is a judicial spirit find he has been quitty of a violation. lins been guilty of a violation of the law or a misdemeanor, as it is termed in the Constitution, the people of the country would not hesitate, if it was proved, to remove him from office. It was a grave matter to talk of impeaching a President but it would the a graver one to the people if a President was guilty and impeachable, and should escape. The impeachment would have the effect of teaching Presidents that certains are the contractions and the statement would have the effect of teaching Presidents that certains are the statement with the statement of the st that it was impossible to be a dictator in this country. That no one should ask the people if they would have a President or a King, for this was an offence to the Rerublic and to its institutions, the ideas of which were that the people of this country established a government founded on the public good and supported by the popular arm, and that king, crown, dictator, or usurper would not be permitted to exist in it, or be even hinted at. It would teach that the lowest official in the custom house to the executive was but the consont of the resent. executive was but the servant of the people Mr. Boutwell was most warmly applaud-

THE LINCOLN INSTITUTION.—The boys of this excellent institution had a fine time of it on Thanksgiving Day. In the morning they attended divine service at the Church they attended divine service at the Couron of the Epiphany, and on their return home paid a flying visit to the Union League, where they were reviewed by Mr. Fall, the President of the League, and other gentlen.en who were present. At one o'clock they received a formal visit from Major General Meade, who is at the head of the Institution. Captain J. Kendali Dexter, a bright Massachusetts boy of fourteen, made a very neat address to the General, expressing the gratitude of the boys for the care and coingratitude of the boys for the care and com-fort which they enjoyed in their new home. General Meade, in reply, addressed the boys with much feeling, in view of the sad asso-ciations presented to him by this company of orphan boys, whose fathers had fought and died under his command. In simple at d well chosen terms he impressed upon them those great duries of obedience, loyalty and love to God and man, the observance of which would make them useful, patriotic, Christian men. The General's remarks were listened to with great attention by his ye utiful audience, who greeted him, at their conclusion, with three hearty cheers. General Meade was accompanied by Col.

de Chanal, of the French army, who is now in this country collecting materials for a work on the late rebellion. He seemed greatly interested at the novel spectacle of this interview between the distinguished commander of the Army of the Potomac and these little "Children of the Common-

The boys were afterwards regaled with a sumptuous Thanks, living dinner, and in the afternoon enjoyed a romp and a game of base ball at Fairmount Park.

Base Ball.-An interesting game of base ball was played on Thankegiving morning on the ground of the Bachelor Base Ball Club at Twelfth and Mifflin streets, First Ward, between the first and second nines of the "Y. P. M." B. B. C. We append the

ANOTHER RESULT OF RECKLESS AND FAST DRIVING.—About 6 15 o'clock, last evening, as Mr. Louis Pelouze was driving to his residence at Roxborough, passing the Wissabickon, two men, with a pair of horses attached to a light cerriage, drove furiously around the turn in the reed. attached to a light cerriage, drove furiously around the turn in the road. It has occurred to us that the narrow-brimmed hats how worn by very many of our citizens do not accord altogether with their Luglish style of clothing. Wider orims, with crowrs a mewhat lower than heretofore we learn are now being worn by English gentry. These 'points of accord' no doubt hat e been duly considered by Mr. Warburton, and we may expect that he will, in his usual careini manner, pay due deference "to the fitness of things" in the efforts he is making to put forth an elegent hat for the winter season. " Wait a few days and see" is our advice.

This word is derived from the Arabic. The well-known substance so called is a fossilized resin of certain unknown coniferous trees, of the fir or pine genus. Great virtues were attributed to it by the ancients. Pliny tells us that Sophocles held amber to be the petrified tears which the birds of Meleager dropped to the memory of that great hero of mythology. Amber has been among the moderns a subject of great discussion. The mysteries in which it was involved was increased by the circumstance that Hebrew and Arabiccharacters wereoften found engraved upon it, in a perfectly legible state. Dr. Thomas, of Koenigsberg, has given us the explanation of this singular fact by stating that the pieces of amberso engraved were neither more nor less than seals. Many of them are preserved in the Museum of Portico, but chiefly brought thither from Herculaneum. It is certainly astonishing that having invented seals, the Romans should not have followed up the idea,

Among the Good things that are being; and invented some sort of printing process for their writings. Never was there a broader hint given to man, and yet it took a thousand years to bridge over the gulf which lies between seals and movable types. The largest known deposits of amber lies on the Prussian coast of the Baltic; it is found in a bed of lignite, which is supposed to extend far under the sea. Another deposit of amber lies almost horizontally on the outskirts of Dirschheim, at a depth of only four fact from the sea. feet from the surface. Pieces of amber are often found lying on the coast after a storm; thus, on the 1st of January, 1848, upwards of 400 kilos of this substance were thrown out of the sea within a very small space. Amber has been known from the highest antiquity, and important medical properties were attributed to it; even now at maintains its place in our pharmacopœias, together with the oil distilled from it, as a stimulant, an astringent, and an antispasmodic. Amber necklaces have been found in Celtic tombs both in England and in Brittany. Regnard tells us that in his time the Margrave of Bronden-burg presented the Emperor of Russia with an arm chair entirely of amber, and the Dauphin with a mirror of the same material.

THE HARRISON BOILER A SAFE STEAM
BOILER.—

This new Steam denerator combines essential advantages in absolute safety from explosion, in firit cost and cut of repairs, durability, economy of fuel, facility of cleaning and transportation, not possessed by any other boiler.

It is formed of a combination of cast-from hollow spheres—each eight inches in external diameter, and three eighths of an inch thick, connected by curved necks, and rebate machine madejoints, held together by wrought from boits with caps at the ends. The form in the strongest known; its strength to resist internal pressure very great—unweakened as it is by punching or riveting, which leasens the strength of the wrought from boiler plate about forty per cent. Every boiler is tested by hydraulic pressure at 300 pounds to the square inch. It cannot be buest under a Newry boiler is tested by hydraulic pressure at 300 pounds to the square inch. It cannot be buest under a Newry boiler is tested by hydraulic pressure without injury to itself, and thus preventing disaster.

Under pressure which might cause rupture in ordinary by illers every joint in this becomes a safety valve. No other steam generator possesses this property of relef under extreme pressure without injury to itself, and thus preventing disaster.

It is not seriously afficied by corrosion, which so soon impairs the strength of the wrought iron boiler, it has economy in fuel, equal to the best boilers.

It gets up steam quickly, at dwith little fuel—produces uper eated steam without separate a pparatus, and is not liable to priming or foaming.

It is easily transported, and may be taken apart so that no piece need welsh more toan eighty pounds. In difficult places of access, the largest boiler may be put through an orening one foot square. It is readily cleaned inside and eat. Under ordinary circumstances it is kept free from permanent deposit by blowing the water entirely out under full pressure once a week. It requires no special ski it in its management. Injured paits can be renewed
