Discourse of the process o

EVENING BULLETIN.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1866.

THE MEETING OF CONGRESS. To-day the last session of the Thirtyninth Congress commences. The members return to their seats, re-instructed by their constituents, and re-inforced by the great declaration of principles made at the late elections. The session will be a brief one, and whatever this Congress proposes to do, it must do quickly. The country looks to its representatives for dignified and constitutional, but firm, fearless, uncompromising action, and it is not likely to be disappointed in this expectation. The President, in a sense which he did not intend, has indeed "left the Constitution in the hands of the people." He has cast in his lot with those who trampled the Constitution under their feet and set its most sacred obligations at open defiance. Congress is the true conservator of Constitutional liberty. and the people demand that there shall be no failure on the part of Congress to defend their rights to the last jot and tittle. What the leading policy of Congress will be, is fore-shadowed by the action of the Republican caucus on Saturday and by other indications of proposed legislation. The course of the President during the past recess has shown the necessity of imposing additional restraints upon that officer for the future. There must be a general clearing out of the appointments recently made. From the highest to the lowest, the Federal offices have been filled with corrupt and treacherous politicians, in whose hands no public affairs are safe, and who hold their positions simply as a reward for their infidelity to their party and their adherence to a cause which is a confessed failure. The Senate owes it to its own self-respect to turn these men out without ceremony, and then to make sure against their being again thrust into office by an arbitrary and unconstitutional exercise of Executive ower

A provision for the early assembling the Fortieth Congress is also of great ment. Mr. Schenck, it is reported, present a bill for this purpose, auzing the new Congress to meet on th of March next. So long as Mr.

Johnson is President there should be no long Congressional recesses, and Mr. Schenck's bill will relieve the country of a great anxiety on this point.

The question of impeachment is perhaps the gravest that will engage the consideration of Congress. It is pretty well understood that the large majority of the Republican members desire to proceed in this matter with all the caution and deliberation that its importance demands. There will be no movement towards impeachment, unless there shall be such preliminary investigations as will clearly fix impeachable offences upon the President. Congress is now in an impregnable position and it can afford to hold the President strictly to account for his official conduct and to compel a decent and respectful regard for the prerogatives of the co-ordinate branch of the Government; but it will not rush, hap-hazard, upon the experiment of an impeachment, unless the array of legal evidence against Mr. Johnson is such as to demand his trial.

That Congress shall stand steadfastly by the Constitutional Amendments, is the clearly-pronounced verdict of the people. With a suicidal folly, the Southern States are rapidly following each other in a rejection of the Amendments. To this course they have been encouraged by the President's fatal policy, and it becomes the duty of Congress to make it known distinctly that there is to be no truckling to the spirit of the rebellion that has manifested itself in the recent legislative action of the Southern States. The indications are that the general tone of the session will be quiet, temperate and dignified, and that the members will address themselves at once to the mass of business which will come before them. The peo-ple have emphatically declared their confidence in them, and no man who fails of his duty and proves recreant to the great trusts committed to him can plead ignorance of the positive will of the constituents who sent him to Congress, and who will hold him to a strict account when he returns to give an account of his stewardship.

/ AUBRATT'S ARREST. Shades of Pharaoh and Moses! A despatch was received at Washington yesterday, December 2d, dated at Alexandria in Egypt, on yesterday, December 2d. The message has been transmitted already over all the telegraphic world of Europe, America, Asia and Africa, and the newspaper readers of the four continents know already that vesterday, John H. Surratt, the principal accomplice of John Wilkes Booth, of eternal infamy, in the murder of President Lincoln, was arrested at Alexandria, by Mr. C. Hale, United States Consul General for Egypt.

While rejoicing that this base scoundrel whose surrender might possibly have saved his mother's life, is at last in the hands of justice, the public will be curious and anxious to learn all the circumstances of his career since the fearful conspiracy in which he was engaged was brought to its conclusion. There have been grave whispers and surmises, concerning persons in exalted positions, and their knowledge of the whereabouts of Surratt for a long period. In the Republican caucus at Washington, on Saturday evening, Mr. Boutwell. of Massachusetts, is reported to have said that "he intended to offer a resolution at an early day calling upon Seward and Johnson for any correspondence in their possession on the subject of the attempt to arrest John Surratt, the escaped conspirator. He had good reason to believe that Johnson knew all the time where Surratt was, and had not only made no effort to arrest him, but had connived at his escape." There is something so monstrous in this accusation, that few persons will be found willing to give it a particle of credit. But there is so much the more reason for a thorough investigation of the affair, and the arrest of Surratt may afford the means of clearing up some of the uncertain points of the assassination plot. The criminal will, of course, be sent home as early as possible, and if Mr. Boutwell's intention is carried out, and an investigation follows, the remaining mysteries of the crime of April 14th, 1865, may be fully cleared away. The trial and punishment of Surratt himself will follow of course; but they are even of less importance than the elucidation of all the facts of the conspiracy.
