HANDSOME TESTIMONIAL. - We learn from Manager Sinn of the Chestnut Street Theatre, that the five insurance companies, which hold risks on the edifice have made denation of several hundred dollars to Mr. James Price. It will be remembered that it was mainly to Mr. Price's efforts that the theatre was saved at the recent fire. He is still suffering greatly from the injuries received at the time of the conflagration. To the efforts of Mr. John E. McDonough, the extent of the subscription for Mr. Price

He recommends an amendment to the law so as to direct the further stay of execu-tions, upon the payment by the debtor of the interest and twenty-five per cent of the principal, within ninety days from the 1st of January, 1868, at which time the present stay law expires, and a like sum with the stay law expires, and a like sum, with the

He says the subject of labor is attracting great attention in that State. The people must first depend upon the native labor now in the commonwealth, white and colored. This is to be encouraged by the repeal of This is to be encouraged by the repeal of oppressive laws. By the encouragement of common schools, and by fair wages and good treatment, the negro ought to have a fair chance, and he should be tried hopefully. The next hope for labor, he says, is from foreign countries.

The Governor discusses the Constitutional amendment, remarking that the people of the South ought not again to be beguiled by the promises of professed allies and friends at the North.

The Congressional party is composed of a large class, the equals in wealth and intelligence of the leaders of the party of the President. It embraces the flower and strength of both the old political parties in the Northern States, brought together by the late war, and now held together by a common sentiment and sympathy. It will become stronger for many years to come. This may be termed the dominant party, led by the ardent terms. It is urged that it would be dishonorable to accept the terms offered in the amendment. It think the objection is not substantial. There was no political power acquired by the surrender of the confederate armies. The terms were as to the soldier, the surrender of his arms of this parole. the surrender of his arms, giving his parole that he would go to his home and remain there peaceably until exchanged as a pris-oner of war, or released from his parole. The officers had more liberal terms granted them; but these terms only such as applied to a prisoner in a military point of view.

This position is fully confirmed by the fact that after one of the Federal commanders had attempted to give a political status to a large division of the insurgent army, the political feature of the treaty was ordered to be stricken out by the Government at Washington."

In another place he says:
"The people of these States, as a conquered nation or as individuals who have forfeited their political rights by the rebellion, are still under the ban of the government, or in still inder the ban of the government, or in the power of the conqueror. In the case of nations at war, the conqueror dictates the terms of peace; in the case of subjects en-gaged in rebellion, when the rebellion is subdued, the government enforces or miti-gates the penalty. The terms of the con-queror in this case, or the penalties fixed by the government, are embedied in the pro-posed amendment. In a review of the case, the government, are embedded in the pro-posed amendment. In a review of the case, there can be no disgrace incurred by the acceptance of the terms proposed, because they are proposed by a powerful govern-ment of the people to States disarmed and ment of the people to States disarmed and unable to resist its authority.

"The disqualifications proposed practically do not go to the army that surrendered at Appomatox Court House, I suppose not five per cent. of the individuals who composed that army will be affected by the proposed constitutional amendment. There was perhaps, more able-bodied Virginians in the State who were detailed or exempted in one way or another from military service than were bearing arms on that day. The disqualifications will fall chiefly on this class. They ought not to complain, because they did not expose their persons in the strife to secure victory in a war they so strife to secure victory in a war they so largely contributed to inaugurate. There were few at Appomattox who had been active in bringing on the war.

The Bailroad Accident in Obio. ZANESVILLE, Ohio, Dec. 4.—By the accident near this place at nine o'clock this morning, ten persons were more or less seriously injured, and one killed.

The westward bound passenger train had but a few minutes before passed safely over the bridge. Two engines followed the train over to the west side of the river, and stopped at the west end of the bridge, the "Elias Fassett" standing on the west pier, with her tender on the first span. The yard engine "Antelope" with one or attended. was standing about one-third of the distance on the same span, between the first and second piers, awaiting the nine o'clock bound passenger train to pass, the bridge having a double track.

The engine of the passenger train going and the engine of the passenger train going east stopped at the wood station, about one hundred yards west of the bridge, took on wood and water, and then passed on to the iron bridge, having a train of four passeniron bridge, having a train of four passenger cars, one baggage and one express car. The last three passenger cars of the train were crowded with people, the front one contained but about a dozen, and was used as a smoking car. The train had passed the gridge of the first span of the structure middle of the first span of the structure, when it gave way, precipitating the engine, tender baggage and express cars into the river, with the front end hanging on the pier; also, the yard engine, tender and one car, and the tender of the engine "Elias Fassett," the engine itself remaining on the pier. The following is a list of the passengers Jesse Hill, Pleasant Valley, Ohio, skull fractured, died at 2 P. M.; James Harland, Gain's Station, Mich., slightly wounded in the head and ankle; Levi Claypool, Nashport, severely wounded in left ankle; Mr. Hart, New Jersey, slightly injured. Em-ployes injured—Thomas Millworth, express messenger, arm seriously nurt: ruomas Wing, conductor, severely injured in the neck; Van. B. Shipley, engineer, bruised in heck; Van. B. Shipley, engineer, bruised in hecken.

neck; Van. B. Shipley, engineer, bruised in head; Siles Higgs, fireman, leg broken, Geo. Thompson, fireman; slightly wounded; Robert Milton, colored porter, legs injured. The cool self-possession of the engineer of the passenger train, Patrick H. Smith, is worthy of all praise. From the time he felt the bridge giving way until his engine was in the water, he sounded his whistle for "down brakes," and the order being obeyed, checked the momentum of the train, and doubtless prevented the other cars, filled with passengers from going into the river. with passengers from going into the river.

The break will be repaired by trestling vithin three days.

The immediate cause of the accident was the increased weight upon the bridge. It was constructed upon the principles of Balman's patent, and should have sustained ten times the weight which crushed it this morning.

CINCINNATI, December 4th.—Considering that the five carsof the Central Ohio passential the five carsof the disaster to-day ger train which met with the disaster to-day were filled with people, principally designed for Zanesville, where the State Pomological Society held a fair to-day, it is miraculous that Jesse Hill, of Pleasant Valley, Ohio, was the only passenger killed. Only two or three passengers were hurt, but all the employes suffered more or less. The bridge was one of Bolman's patent, and was the first from railroad bridge arected in the ger train which met with the disaster to-day the first iron railroad bridge erected in the state, and has been heretofore considered perfectly safe. Travel by that route will not e interrupted.
