The London Times, in an editorial of this morning, fully agrees with the policy of the President of the United States, as set forth in his annual message to Congress. It frankly declares that the Alabama case ought to be settled promptly and amicably. It expresses deep regret that the whole matter was not compromised, and thus disposed of at a much earlier date than the present.

The London Times has no doubt but that Maximilian has abdicated, and looks forward to intervention by the Government at Washington as the next step; that intervention will be popular instead of unpopular, and cheap instead of costly; that the Americans will enter the country as friends; they will hunt its enemies and thus render civilization possible and transform that community into a civilized state.

They will have this advantage also, that they will seem less like invaders than their predecessors. This will preserve the name and form of a Mexican Republic, and probably leave native Mexicans as its ostensible ruler.
