Fire at Oxford, Maine.
[To the United States Associated Press.]
PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 15.—Robinson's
Manufacturing and Woolen Mills, at Oxford, Me., were burned tast night.

OITE BULLETIN. DESTRUCTIVE FIRE NEAR GERMAN-

TOWN. An Extensive Woolen Mill Burned.

Last evening about six o'clock, a fire broke out in the extensive woolen mill of James Armstrong, located near Duy's Lane Station, on the Germantown railroad in the Twenty-second Ward. The establishment covers three-quarters of an acre of ground, and comprises three buildings, all connected together forming an L. There is an old mill, two stories in height, and two new structures, one four stories and the new structures, one four stories and the other hestories. The structures are all stone, and were built in the most substantial-manner. The mills have been engaged lately in making cassimeres and balmoral e flames originated in the picker room in one of the new buildings, and spread rapidly through the structure. There was a strong northwest breeze prevailing at the time, and the flames were soon communicated to the other buildings.

The fire companies in Germantown were promptly on the ground. The bright light caused by the fire also attracted to the scene caused by the are also attracted to thescenthe companies from Frankford and several from the upper part of the city also reached the spot. The steamers of the Fellowship and Franklin companies of Germantewn, and Decatur and Washington companies of Frankford were in service. The William Bonn Hose Company's steamer was present. Penn Hose Company's steamer was present renn nose company's steamer was present but did not go into service. The Resolution Hose and Good Intent engine comparies from the city were also on the ground.

The only water to be obtained was from a creek adjacent to the mills. This was frozen over, and holes had to be cut in the ice to allow the water to be drawn. The firemen worked energetically, but were unable to save the mills or their contents.

save the mins or their contents.

The fire raged furiously for nearly two hours, and the sparks were wafted nearly half a mile, setting fire to some of the dry leaves in Duy's woods.

The mills were completely gutted, and the contents were almost entirely destroyed. Nothing remains this morning but the bare walls and a portion of the machinery in a greatly damaged condition.

The machinery in the establishment was very valuable, being almost entirely new, and made in the medern style. It was nearly all destroyed or ruined.

The total loss is estimated at $100,000 and is partly covered by insurance.

About 150 hands were employed in the mills, but nearly all had left before the fire commenced.

As before stated, the flames originated in the picker room. One of the workmen was carrying a bundle of wool upon his shoulder. The wool was accidentally brought in contact with a gas light and took fire. The man thoughtessly cast the burning wool upon the floor, and the whole room was in a blaze in a few minutes, the flames getting beyond the control of the few per sons who were present. Two men were severely burned—the one who was carrying the bundle and another who went to his as-

Mr. James Armstrong, the proprietor of the mills, resided close to the establishment. His house was saved. Several outbuildings were also saved.

Wm Torrance, who attended the picker, was badly burned. He was the man who was carrying the bundle of wool which took fire from the gas light.

Patrick Flizpatrick, a spinner, in his fright rushed on to the roof of the third story building. The flames cut off his retreat, but he succeeded in getting back to the third story. He then jumped from the window to the top of the dye house, and, was seriously injured.

The other employes succeeded in getting out safely. held for higher prices, and are now quoted
