EVENING BULLETIN.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1866.

TO ADVEBTISERS. In order to secure the insertion of adwertisements in our regular edition, it is absolutely necessary that they be sent to the office before 12 o'clock, noon. The paper must be put to press at a particular moment, so that supplies to agents in the country may be sent off by the earliest trains in the afternoon, and with our present large edition, we cannot delay for advertisements or anything else. Our friends will therefore please send their Advertisements at as early an hour in the day as possible. Those sent after 12 o'clock are likely to be omitted.

CHRISTMAS DAY. To-morrow being Christmas day, and in order to enable all persons connected with the Evening Bulletin to enjoy the holiday, no paper will be issued from this office on that day.

CHRISTMAS.

There is a peculiar charm about the great festival which the Christian Church has handed down through these past eighteen centuries which belongs to no other anniversary occasion. From the splendid ceremonial of the Church of Rome down to the Puritan simplicity of New England theology or the still more positive primness of our own "Society of Friends," all classes and conditions of Christendom come more or less under its charmed influences. For a time, in the first stern, ascetic Protestantism of the Pilgrim Fathers, the effort was made to crush out everything that was was thought to savor of Rome, or that was in any sort "of the earth, earthy." But the same failure that attended the "Blue laws," in other respects, attended the attempt to destroy that traditional regard for the day that commemorates the birth of the Prince of Peace. So in the land of Penn. The festivals and fasts, and usages of the Church of England were rigidly eschewed by George Fox and his followers, but neither they nor the soberest of their descendants could altogether resist the genial witcheries of Christmas or deny to each other or themselves the recognition of this day of kindly feeling and good-will.

With each recurring Christmas Day, there is a shifting of the scene which makes it always fresh and new, and yet there is an adherence to old customs and usages that makes each Christmas a living-over again of all its predecessors in the past. There are the same mysterious preparations for the day, and the same eager, impatient, curiosity among the young people, who are to be made happy by the thousand-and-one ingenious devices of parental affection. The same little innocent plots of the children to surprise the parents, and the same affected ignorance of the elders, prepared with stereotyped outbursts of surprise, when the grand crisis of Christmas at last arrives. There are the myriads of the abodes of poverty and institutions of charity to be gladdened with the rare treat of a good Christmas dinner, and enriched with the tokens of the hearty sympathies of more favored neighbors. There are Christmas trees to be decked with toys and trinkets and lights, and parlors and halls and churches to be festooned with graceful evergreens. Every device and appliance, by which children's hearts are to be made glad, and the burdens of the poor, for the one day at least, lifted off, and the rejoicing of the Christian world over an incarnate Saviour made manifest, belong to this

And yet, athwart even the glow of brightness and innocent hilarity of Christmas Day, as with most of life's realities, there is always a growing shadow. As we move forward into or past middle life, Christmas memories mingle with the Christmas music and mirth, that temper the exuberance that once belonged to the enjoyment of the day. All anniversaries have one sad element in them, because there is one vacancy after another to be noted with each recurrence of the season, and there are few firesides where, amid the unbounded happiness of childhood and the reflected joy of maturer years, there is not some heart quietly keeping down strong memories of a dead Past, lest it should cast a momentary gloom over the merry joyousness of the festal day. Even short of this, there is a sort of well-defined regret at growing too old to look any longer for the Christmas presents that made boyhood or girlhood so happy at this season. Fortunately, by way of compensation, most people are so constituted as practically to realize the Christian precept that "it is more blessed to give than to receive," and Grandfather ransacking the toy-shops for his first grandchild, or the old bachelor uncle, scattering his Christmas boxes, in the midst of his little hosts of nephews and nieces, has a keener enjoyment after all than ever he realized in the "days of auld lang syne." It is a day to buryaway all sad memories out of sight, and if age, or sorrow, or care have chastened and moderated the capacity for merriment and festivity, the remedy, for the time, is to live life over again on Christmas Day, not in its later associations and suggestions, but in the merry days when life wore nothing but holiday garments, and before wrinkles and rheumatism and spectacles began ver, to admonish of the on-comings of old great tree. It is only by being children again lexics in Christmas Day, that we fully realize its by-gone pleasures, and it is the perfection of human wisdom, in more senses than one, always to live like little

With to-morrow's daylight, millions of young hearts will overflow with innocent joy, and young and old will again give utterance to the old song af Bethlehem "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men!" To our readers and friends we tender all the pleasant compliments of the season, and wish them, in the fullest sense of the words, a very "Happy Christmas;"

A GOOD LESSON. The robbery of a hundred thousand dollars' worth of securities from the store of Cochran & Co., on last Friday night, has created a well-founded uneasiness with regard to the safety of valuables of all descriptions which business men and others are accustomed to keep in their own possession. As fire-proofs, iron safes and brick walls and arches are a good and sufficient protection, but as thief-proofis, honest human ingenuity has no yet achieved what dishonest human ingenuity cannot overcome. The whole struggle of modern mechanics is to out-do that which has been already accomplished, and while skill is exhausting itself to defy the Litacks of burglars, other skill, with reckless villainy, is taxed to invent tools and appliances to penetrate iron Walls and open cunning locks and rifle strong boxes. In the case already referred to there was really nothing whatever to interfere with the operations of the robbers. An entrance once effected into the store, the brick wall of the "safe" was easily cut through, and the valuable contents carried out and deliberately overhauled. There was no necessity for haste, and the burglars smoked their choice cigars and drank their fine wines and brandies, while they examined boxes and drawers and wallets at their leisure. How they came and how they went with their booty is a matter for the police, but that they should have carried off $100,000, much of which was in negotiable shape, is simply a lesson of the folly of keeping such valuable property in private and unguarded establishments. Where private watchmen are employed, or arrangements made by which the police can inspect the interior of a store at all hours of the night, while upon their ordinary patrol, the risk is very slight. But these expedients are rarely resorted to, and behind the solid doors and shutters of the majority of our business houses, such scenes as those we have described may be enacted at any period of the night, with scarcely a chance of interruption or detection.

The consciousness of this danger to which millions of property are hourly exposed, has recently led to the establishment of a company whose sole business it is to ensure the safety of all descriptions of portable valuables. This "Safe Deposit Company," as it is called, undertakes, at fixed rates of insurance, to take charge of money, deeds, bonds, stocks, jewelry, plate, and manner of securities, and to hold itself responsible for their safe keeping. This trust, backed by the solid capital of the company, is to be fulfilled by means of the various mechanical safe-guards against fire and theft, protected by the ceaseless personal vigilance of such trusty watchmen and other agents as will reduce the chances of loss to the lowest possible minimum. The greater the amount of valuables deposited, the greater will be the inducement, as well as the ability of the company to guard itself and its depositors against loss. The whole idea is an excellent one, and the lesson of the robbery on Friday night will probably result in commending it to the approval of all who, like Wemmick, have a just appreciation of the importance of their "portable pro-

LONG-A-COMING.

Long-a-Coming, N. J., having built itself a new meeting house, and placed a steeple upon it, and having put up some new dwellings with "modern improvements," has got proud, and is becoming ashamed of the ancient name. It desires to be known hereafter in the Gazetteers as "Dayton," a name which it esteems very much more respectable than its original title. This is suggestive of the story of Pedlington, an English town, which having got up a new pump, or improved the parish lock-up with a coat of whitewash, applied to have its name changed to Great Pedlington. The Commission appointed by Parliament to consider the matter, took all things into consideration, and accordingly changed the name of the town to Little Pedlington. The point of this application is this: All the importance that Long-a-Coming has ever attained since its old days of drowsiness that were only disturbed by the hum of the mosquito or the sting of the sand-burr, is due to the Camden and Atlantic Railroad. This road, has opened up to market millions of acres of land between Camden and the ocean that would else have remained as wild as the days when Columbus set sail upon his voyage of discovery. These wild lands have appreciated in value enormously since the opening of the road. A city has sprung up by the sea as a consequence of the construction of the road, and land that was formerly almost given away by the acre, is now huckstered out by the foot. There were some public-spirited and far-seeing Jerseymen who contributed liberally towards the accomplishment of this work; but the subscriptions made in the sandy State came from a very few persons, and they were principally from men who had already evinced their enterprise by developing the manufacturing interests of the State.

ing by a banquetatthe La Pierre Honse. Philadelphia capitalists also put their The affair was a great success, and it shoulders to the financial wheel of the tended to illustrate the influence for good work most handsomely, and both they, and the liberal few in New Jersey, have received but few direct returns for the outlay, while Jerseyat large has derived golden advantages from the important enterprise. A comparatively few paid most of the cost, and the Jersey many secured most of the advantages. At is notorious that native Jerseymen who have been enriched by the appreciation in the value of their land, as a consequence of the construction of the road, resort to every expedient, whether of shallop or horse teams, to save a penny in the freight charges made by the railroad company. Long-a-Coming may be an exception to this rule of a desire to win All without staking anything, on the beads-I-win tails-you-lose principle. If o, let it be henceforth known, as Dayton, and much joy may it have of the change; but if this revivified town did nothing for the road that lifted it out of its ancient lethargic condition of obscurity, then let its name be changed, as the name of Pedlington was changed, and let it be henceforth known as Short-

A SHAKING OF DRY BONES. There is fear and trepidation among the recent appointees in the Internal Revenue department. The Senate is 'after them with a sharp stick," and although their fate has been postponed until after the holidays, it hangs over their heads like the sword of the Syracusan gentleman so often spoken of as having had his appetite spoiled by martial cutlery. It is the skeleton in the house, the avenging spirit, the accusing angel, the pursuing shadow, the everything of that kind that makes evil-doers. or those who profit by the evil-doing of others, feel uncomfortable and apprehen. sive. Throughout the States and territories there are two hundred and twenty Internal Revenue districts, each of which is entitled to an Assessor and Collector. They are generally lucrative offices, and from the large number of subordinates under the control of the Collectors and Assessors, they have a large political influence. Of the four hundred and forty principals, Andrew Johnson has removed no less than two hundred and fifteen, or nearly one-half, and for no other reason than that they continued to adhere to the principles which that distinguished renegade has deserted. A perusal of the list of the decapitated, with the date of their decapitations, will reveal some curious facts. About the time of the Wigwam Convention, and when the President was inspired with full confidence, the axe was plied nimbly, and heads fell into the basket with a celerity that was most cheering to the hungry Copperheads who had got a taste of blood, and who had a most rampant, Oliver Twistish desire for "more." The Fall elections threw a terrible wet blanket over these lively doings, and even Andrew Johnson took the significant popular hint, or he dreaded the meeting of Congress, for while sixty heads went into the baske during fifteen days, at about the time of the meeting of the Wigwamites, there were but four decapitations during the fifteen days prior to the first of December. It is understood that the Senate, while in Executive session, have determined not to take up these appointments until after the holidays, and they promise that they will then give them such a sifting as will separate the wheat from the tares. There is a cheerful lookout ahead for the Johnsonised democrats and the democratised Republicans who have sold out their principles for a mess of Internal Revenue pottage. Like the boy who has been promised a whipping after the company have gone, they are not in a frame of mind to enjoy their Christmas turkey and mince-pie. It was a refinement of cruelty for the Senate to treat them thus; but "the way of the transgressor is hard," and having made their election they must "grin and bear" its consequences. Below will be found a list of the new Assessors and Collectors in Pennsylvania, with the nates of the Departments at Washing ton, who have taken the places of true Republicans because the latter were faithful and consistent, must have patience; their turn will come in good time. They must keep calm until after the holidays. A PLEASANT OCCASION. The Press Club of this city celebrated its third anniversary on Saturday even-which is accomplished by this association of journalists. As a general rule, the members of the newspaper trater nity are not remarkable for emmently harmonious professional intercourse, and in some cities they drag their differences before the public in a manner that exhibits quite as much bad taste as it shows ill temper. The Press Club of this city has done much to promote the 'era of good feeling" by bringing professional brethren together in kindly social intercourse.

THE GALAXY.—The January number of this excellent fortnightly magazine commences the third volume of one of the most successful magazine enterprises ever started in this country. As a substantial proof of this success, Messrs. W.C. & F. P. Church have enlarged the "Galaxy" by the addition of sixteen pages, and the use of new and very handsome type. The contents of the January number are very varied and attractive. Anthony Trollope's story, "The Claverings," is continued, and a new story, "Tristan," by Edward Spencer, is commenced. Mr. Wm. C. Church contributes a temperate and well-written paper against the policy of confiscation, though his argument is scarcely strong enough to make many converts. "The Quest for English," by Richard Grant White, is a brief but very interesting disquisition on the inaccuracies of the best English standard writers, illustrated chiefly by extracts from the "Spectator." Several other good prose and poetical articles appear in this number of the "Galaxy." Few American periodicals deserve a more cordial and general patronage, and there will probably be a largely increased subscription, with the commencement of this new volume.
