Over One Hundred Thousand Dollars in Bonds and Stocks Stolen.

The Act Committed in Daylight

Escape of the Perpetrators

We have to record another of those bold, adroit and successful bond robberies which have marked the last few months in the Eastern cities. It is the first of the character which has taken place in Philadelphia for some time, and it ought to be the

The circumstances are as follows, as we learn them in the first flush of the discovery of the robbery:

About 121 co'clock to-day two persons. dressed in a gentlemanly manner, entered the office of Mr. C. P. Bayard, stock broker, No. 209 Chestnut street.

The office at the time was in charge of Mr. J. Bayard, a venerable gentleman, father, we believe, of Mr. C. P. Bayard, No one else was in the place. The fire-proof door was open, and the safe within it was also open.

On the entrance of the two strangers, they asked for Mr. C. P. Bayard, and made quite a number of inquiries as to what kind of stocks he dealt in. Mr. Bayard senior answered their questions corteously, and apparently to their satisfaction.

While thus engaged, standing up talking to strangers Nos. 1 and 2, stranger No. 3 made, his appearance and inquired of Mr. Bayard, where he could get a bill of ex-

Mr. Bayard informed stranger No. 3 that he could get one at Browns & Bowen's, next door above. Stranger No. 3 then disappeared, and shortly afterwards strangers Nos. 1 and 2 also left the premises in the quietest and most gentlemany manner.

More than an hour elapsed before the robbery was discovered, and an attempt was made to discover the amount of the loss.

From Cincinnati. [To the U.S. Associated Press.]

CINCINNATI, Dec. 27 .- There was considerable excitement at Lebanon, Ohio, yesterday, occasioned by an attempted conspiracy to defraud a Life Insurance Company. A man named McFadden arrived at the house of Frank Richardson, near Lebanon, on the night of the twenty-fourth, and it was given out the next day that he had died of cholera, and the coffin, supposed to contain the remains, was sent to Eaton, Objo, and interred at midnight.

Suspicions of foul play being aroused, Officers were sent from Lebanon, who examined the grave and found the coffin contained broom corn seed. McFadden's whereabouts are not known. Dr. Richardson, agent for the Life Insurance Company at Eaton, Frank Richardson and B. M. Batchelder, and parties implicated have been arrested.
