EVENING BULLETIN.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1866.

ANNO DOMINI 1866. With this number of the EVENING BULLETIN.another volume is closed and the record of another year of the world's history is made up. This last day of the year is one which pre-eminently suggests the consideration of the past, and we pause in our onward career to contemplate briefly the course which Old Time has run, in his ceaseless race, since the year of grace, 1866, began.

In reviewing our own national affairs the chief point of interest which presents itself, is the apostacy of President Johnson, his conflict with a loyal Congress, his extraordinary appeal to the people, and his signal defeat at their hands. A year ago, Andrew Johnson enjoyed the same popular confidence that had been expressed by his election to the Vice Presidency. A year ago, the work of reconstruction, which an unsuspecting nation was willing to confide to his hands, was everywhere believed to be progressing rapidly and favorably, and few prophets would have been bold enough to predict that the close of the year would have found ten States still divested of their "practical relations to the Union." But equally few would have ventured to prophesy that the President would have placed his hand upon the first development of the loyal sentiment of the South and strangled it at its birth. Congress has stood boldly by the rights of the Union, and the country has been saved, by the courage and patriotism of its representatives, from the effects of the treachery of the Executive.

The Presidential tour to Chicago was made the occasion of a direct appeal to the people against the action of their representatives and the challenge was freely taken up, at the ensuing elections. Mr. Johnson's violence, profanity and indecency so shocked the moral sense of the country as to destroy the last linzering hold which he retained upon the confidence of the people, and his virtual defeat at the polls was overwhelming and final.

During the past summer the country has been severely scourged by the dreaded Cholera in isolated localities, but this terrible disease did not assume a general form, as had been anticipated and feared. In New York and Philadelphia its visitation was comparatively light; while along the line of the Western waters its ravages were extremely sewere. Its appearance this year may be but the precursor of a more formidable visit next summer, and should be reseived as a warning to be better prepared for it, if it should again attack us. The year has been distinguished by much returning prosperity. The more sensible people of the South have ad-crops, which were last year lying waste. At the North, abundant harvests have rewarded the labor of the husbandmen, and both manufactures and the mechanic arts have been prosecuted with an activity, only bounded by the limited supply of skilled labor, which has resulted from the losses of the war.

While the general aspect of domestic affairs has been comparatively uneventful; abroad, the year now closing has been marked a series of by events which have revolutionized Europe and amazed the world. With a suddenness like the shifting of a stage scene, Prussia has stepped forward into an attitude of physical and diplomatic power that has placed her foremost in the nations of Europe, humbled the proud house of Hapsburg, set at naught the machinations of the wily Emperor of France, and reconstructed, at a single dash, the map of a continent. Bismarck, a year ago, was a name almost unknown on this side of the Atlantic. To-day it is a, name venerated in Prussia and Italy, feared in Austria and France, and extolled and admired throughout the civilized world.

The year has marked the zenith of Napoleon's glory. Failure has been stamped upon two of his great enterprises, and with precarious health weakening his hitherto undaunted and ambitious spirit, the Emperor of the French has had the mortification of secing his schemes on the Rhine and in Mexico thwarted and set aside. His prestige as the great arbiter of Europe is forever gone, and the year closes with his star waning from its pristine glory. The event which has most concerned both hemispheres during this passing year has been the great triumph of science and the mechanic arts in the success of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable. The failures of former years have been repaired and the Old World and the New have been bound together in instantaneous communication by the indemitable perseverance and energy of a son of New England, Cyrus W. Field. The submarine cables connect Europe and America and the greatest material problem of the age has been solved, after the world had almost decided that its solution was an impossibility.

As the year goes out, the world enjoys an almost unbroken peace. The classic ground of Crete is almost the only scene of contention and war. The oppression and cruelty of the Turks towards the Christians of Candia is exciting the sympathy of the civilized world and there can be little doubt that there will ere long be such foreign interference as will extend to these persecuted people the protection they so much need. It is pleasant to reflect that with this exception, and that of the hostilities in South America, the year 1866 closes upon the world at rest. May the new year, just about to unfold its unread budget, prove to be one of like peace and prosperity for our own country and for all the kingdoms of the world.

OURSELVES.

Individuals are not deemed liable to the charge of egotism when they speak of themselves or their business in taking a retrospective glance at the past twelve months, at the close of the year. We will therefore be pardoned for making some reference to the BULLETIN upon the last day of an (to us) eventful year. The first day of 1866 found us cooped-up, inconvenient and comparatively obscure quarters at No. 329 Chestnut street. We had removed thither temporarily in the hope of obtaining speedy possession of the brown stone building, No. 607 Chestnut street, which had been purchased for the use of the establishment. On the night of the first of January the building took fire and was almost totally destroyed. Although the loss was very severe, we had the advantage of being enabled to reconstruct the property in a manner to precisely suit our business, and the year that commenced so disastrously for the concern, finds it, at its close, in possession of quarters that are certainly not second in elegance, convenience or completeness to any newspaper office in the country. Through all the vicissitudes of the year the paper has prospered beyond precedent, and its proprietors have the strongest incentives to make renewed efforts to keep up the interest and value of the pape; to both advertisers and subscribers. In taking and the year that commenced so disasadvertisers and subscribers. In taking a retrospective glance at the events of 1866 we look hopefully forward to 1867, and while thanking the patrons of the paper for their past generous support we wish them all a happy New Year.

THE YACHT RACE. The great ocean yacht race has been accomplished, with no disaster beyond the sad loss of a portion of the crew of the Fleetwing. Mr. Bennett's yacht, the Henrietta, was the winner of this extraordinary contest, making the run of nearly three thousand miles in just fourteen days. The Fleetwing and Vesta were close on the heels of the winner, the three vessels arriving at Cowes within the period of ten hours. This is certainly a fine achievement of American seamanship and has excited great interest among the yachtsmen of both continents. The run of the yachts has been greatly exceeded by several clipper ships; but the rough weather encountered during the recent race makes the feat one of the most remarkable on record. It has been stated that nearly $100,000 were staked upon the result of the contest, but the real point to be settled was the quality of our present American naval architecture and this has been decided in a way that will revive all that feeling of national pride which was aroused by dressed themselves to the cultivation of | the performances of the America, fiftheir desolated fields and millions of teen years ago. This yacht race was acres have produced their accustomed coked upon as a mere piece of foolhardi set and Brown Stort. Sether with Jordan's celebrated Toule Als, Fine Cider, &c., always on a heard.

ness, so long as its specess was a doubtful one, but its triumphant accomplishment will be a source of congratulation and satisfaction for Americans all over the world.

RED TAPE. The other day the wall of a burned building at Twelfth and Market streets fell down and killed a man who was at work beneath it, and who had no suspicion of impending peril. At the Coroner's inquest the remarkable fact came out that the Building Inspectors had been notified of the dangerous condition of the ruins, and that they had paid no attention to the notification, giving as a reason for this neglect a statement that the rules of the department required that such notices should be delivered in writing and signed by two citizens! It is probable that the rules require that where such a formal notice is served upon the Inspectors it becomes an imperative duty to attend to the matter complained of; but it is too monstrous for belief that they cannot perform their duty without this formal notification. It would be as reasonable to suppose that the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department would have to suspend active operations until he received official notice of the existence of a fire which he had himself discovered, or that the policeman who witnesses a burglary should decline to arrest the rogues until the owner of the property despoiled should make a written affidavit of his loss.

As in the case of the fastidious gentleman who declined to save a drowning lady because he had never been introduced to her, these Building Inspectors are too nice by half. The easy-going public has been under the impression that the officials named looked to the interests of the community by keeping an eye on dangerous property, and that in cases of fire, especially, it was their business and not the business of private citizens to keep a look-out that life and limb are not endangered by toppling ruins. If their hands are really bound by any rule which forbids their attending promptly, and of their accord, to to their official duties, the sooner the ridiculous red-tape is cut the better.

THANKS, YOUR HONOR! It is announced that Mayor McMichael has issued an order to the police to suppress the Tin Horn nuisance. It is just like His Honor, to have a due regard for the peace and comfort of our citizens. Now let the police obey their orders, and neither the public, nor the temperance societies will object to the number of horns they take on the usually noisy New Years' Eve. Indeed, the best man will take the most horns. The Toots family have had fair warning of the Mayor's intentions and they cannot complain if their hideons tin trumpets are suddenly confiscated for the public good.
