The Czar apprehended that the lease, giving the preference to Americans over the English who had so long enjoyed the coveted translated and the covered to the covered t interesting chapter in the whole business. Under date of December 22, 1866, Mr. Clay wrote to Senator Cole as follows: ST. Petersburg, Russia, December 1866.—Dear Sir: Your letter of the 5th ultimo was duly received, and I immediate applied to Prince Gortschakoff for the grant The Prince has not been very ell of late, but he sent me word through Baron Stockel (who is now here) that it was impossible for the Russian Government to do anything, as the proposed grant was already vithin the privileged bounds of the Russian American Fur Company. This settles the matter so far as the government is concerned, but it is very possible that he company themselves might grant you a out to find some responsible person of that company, to lay the project before them, or him, but have not succeeded. I am told that the company is most prisorable person to the country adjoining the British possessions, says only those who are unacquainted with it will deny the importance of the acquisition. the company is most miserably managed, and he stock is worth next to nothing—all enterprise having died out of it. o there is but small hopes of doing anvthing with them; but should anything occur, of Sitka, or rather the entrance to it, is never will write you again.
