A Rebel Cavalry Officer in Command RICHMOND, July 14.—There is great sympathy manifested both here and throughout the South for the unfortunate Prince Maximillan, whose tragic end seems to have awakened all the slum-bering ideas of rebel daring. From information of which I am in receipt within the past few days, I can state that organizations are being formed with concerted action in all the Southern States, whose purpose it is to avenge the death of a gallant Prince and former sympathizer of theirs. They are all to be composed of military men familiar with deeds of desperation, and the daily accessions to the party are said to be enormous, though the organization is kept perfectly secret. A daring and well-known ex-rebel officer, of cavalry fame, is it is said, des gnated as the chosen leader of the forces, and funds from Europe are received. The expedition will move secretly to Mexico, concentrating in a remote portion of Texas, where supplies will be previously forwarded, and from where a movement will be made upon the Liberat army, as circumstances dictate. European goremments are said to be involved in this movement, and will probably co-operate with it.
