

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"A Story of Doom, and other Poems," is the title of Jean Ingelow's new volume just published by Roberts, Brothers, Boston. Countless readers who have learned to love the genius of this sweet Scotch poet, have waited long and anxiously for her second volume, with a sensation of mingled hope and fear. There have been many who believed that Miss Ingelow's genius was that of a transient order which exhausts itself upon its first efforts, or, at least, displays all of its finest gifts in its first production to the world. There have been many more, with stronger faith and deeper appreciation of the depth and reality of her poetic genius, who have eagerly waited for the coming volume, confident that it would fulfil their expectations and prove that her individuality had not expended itself, but that she possessed that true element of genius, a capacity for continued growth.

The new volume abundantly rewards this faith. The poem, or more strictly speaking, the epic fragment which gives the volume its name is set in a sketch of genius, being preceded and followed by a series of exquisite poems of a miscellaneous character. "The Dreams that came true," and "The Songs of the Voices of the Birds," abound with the peculiar pathos, beauty and vigorous sentiment of the author. "Laurance" is a narrative poem of a thousand lines, of rare merit, from which we should like to make copious extracts. A single passage must suffice. The hero, Laurance, lived quietly in the country with his care-father and his happy parents: "Thus all were satisfied with life by day, For two sweet years a happy course was theirs; Happy, but yet the fortune, young Laurance loved and much regretted, came to him, a stroke of the heart, a quickening grief, O sight and hearing to the delicate Beauty and music of an altered world; began to walk in a mysterious light, Which death reveal and yet transform; which gives Destiny, sorrow, youth, and death, and life, Intense meaning; in desquamation, Like my shining night; meet will I love. Fair, modest eyes had she, the girl he loved; A silencer, thoughtful, grave, sincere. She never turned from him with sweet caprice, Nor chiding him for his heavy lashes low; But excellent as youth her grace was up; And her eyes were ready, passing on, Had left him all the while she made him see; That by her own true will, and fixed intent, She held him thus remote. Therefore, albeit He knew she did not love him, yet so long As of a rival she was, he dwelt All in the present, without fear, or hope, Fatal and when in the deep sea of love, And could not care to have her know, and a perfect book containing about 300.

The house of Henry Fitzpatrick, No. 828 Walnut street, was entered through the hall door. A considerable sum of money was stolen.

A DOUBLE CHARGE.—Samuel Wardlaw was before Alderman Masson last evening upon charges of attempted larceny of a horse and assault and battery. It is alleged that Wardlaw and another man were observed in the act of untying the horse at Engel & Wolf's farm during the German picnic last Wednesday. The parties were not arrested. Wardlaw was captured yesterday afternoon at Fifth and Chestnut streets by an Eighth District policeman. After his arrest he assaulted the officer. The case was committed in default of $3,000 bail to answer at Court.

DIED BY THE BOARD.—George W. Gibbon and Charles Huntzberger were arrested yesterday, and held to bail to answer the charge of false pretences. Upon making certain representations about property, &c., they obtained hearing at a house at Rising Sun. After receiving for some time without paying any money, Gibbon left, and went to a house in the neighborhood of Fifth and Green streets, to board. The Rising Sun man concluded that he had been swindled, and had both parties arrested.

FIRE.—An old two-story building, partly stone, brick and frame, at the stone yard of Conroy & Co., on Albion street, above Chestnut, Ninth Ward, was destroyed by fire about half-past three o'clock this morning. The building was occupied as a blacksmith shop and for the storage of rope, blocks, tackle, &c. The loss of the building is estimated at $10,000 upon which there is no insurance. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

STEAMBOAT EXPLOSIONS.—The daily trips of the John A. Warner on the Delaware afford delightful little excursions for those who can only indulge in brief absences from town. She plies between Philadelphia and Bristol, stopping at various points on the Delaware river. There are few more refreshing and pleasant recreations than an afternoon's sail on the Warner's regular trip, which starts from Chestnut street wharf at 2 o'clock daily.

CHARGED WITH EMBROIDERY.—A young man named R. W. Burton, employed as a clerk in a store No. 606 Arch street, was before Alderman Williams last evening upon the charge of embezzlement. The deficiency discovered thus far by the books amounts to several hundred dollars. The accused was held in $1,000 bail for a hearing.

Have found out reason for Philadelphia's... and talked about uncomfortable things... Low motives, bore, and shame, and hollows... The hollows of the world, fill with pomp, and... Have escaped the world, and found a way to... Being so hollow, it should break some day... And let us in, yet, since we are not grand... O, not at all, and as for deceptions, we... That may be or may not be, it is well... For us to be as happy as we can be.

"Songs with Preludes," and the fine ballad of "Whistling" by Eddy Stone, fame, conclude the volume. It will be hailed with delight by those of cultivated readers, who have made Jean Ingelow the High-Priestess of Modern Song. The volume is issued in the usual excellent style of the well-known publishers. It is for sale by Smith, English & Co., 23 North Sixth street.

"Orville College," Mrs. Henry Wood's new novel, lately published by the Petersons, is a capital novel. It has no love plot, no murder, no bigamy, nothing indeed, that is sensational. But it is a good healthy story of school life in England. No one who has written such stories seems to understand better the varieties of character to be found in the young. Mrs. Wood's boys and girls are all natural, and the scenes and incidents she describes are just such as are apt to occur in a large boarding school or college.

CITY BULLETIN.

TAVERN-KEEPER KILLED.—Last night two men entered a tavern at No. 376 Callowhill street, and commenced drinking very freely. Finally the tavern-keeper was invited to join in. He thought that his customers were pretty good fellows, and he joined them. The liquor got rather the best of the tavern-keeper. While in a half-conscious state, the others relieved him of about $250 which he had in his pocket, filled a three-gallon demijohn with whiskey, and departed. Complaint was made at the Park Police Station, and about 6 o'clock this morning—officers Craig and Gibson, of the Schuylkill Harbor Police, arrested the alleged thieves on the way path, above Bridge street, with the whiskey in his possession. The prisoner belongs to Schuylkill Haven, and is named James Ford. He was taken to the police station. The man who got the money has not been arrested.

HORSE ROBBERIES.—Last evening the dwelling house, No. 1327 North Front street, occupied by A. J. McCleary, was entered, and was robbed of a lady's gold watch and $110 in money, which was taken from a bureau drawer, in the sleeping apartment of Mr. McCleary. The dwelling of Dr. J. T. Cooper, No. 1310 Marshall street, was entered last evening, through the front door. The thieves carried off a gold watch, some silver tea and coffee spoons, and a pocket book containing about $30.
