His cousin, Edward Dalton, and Anna Smith knew of no other trouble. Patrick Devey and Morris O'Meara, who keep a paper-stock warehouse near the deceased's place, missed Dalton, and broke open the door, when the fact of his death was ascertained. He had talked rather wildly to both these persons, and told O'Meara that some one had threatened to shoot him. The jury ren-dered a verdict in accordance with the few facts elicited.
