He made the following remarks on the occasion:

Mr. President: I have the honor to place in your hands the letters by which my august mas-ter, the Emperor, accredits me to you as his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentify. The idea of being represented near the head fy the American Union, and of establishing with him more direct relations, is not of recent origin in the mind of the Emperor.

This idea occurred to him at the time he as-This idea occurred to him at the time he ascended the throne. Circumstances alone have thus far prevented him from putting it in execution, and thereby giving to a nation of whom he is equally the friend and admirer, the sincerest evidence of his sympathies. The Emperor is very well aware, Mr. President, that the American people by the holdness of its enterperor is very well aware, Mr. President, that the American people, by the boldness of its enterprises and the grandeur of the destinies it is preparing for itself, is entitled to the admiration of the world. Although separated by distances, which a few years ago could scarcely be measured or overcome, our two nations have more than one cause for mutual esteem, while on our part, I can affirm there is a strong desire for a closer acquaintance. Both conquerors, each has part, I can affirm there is a strong desire for a closer acquaintance. Both conquerors, each has followed in its conquests the track traced for it by the manner and instincts of its epochs; one conquering by the force of arms, the other chiefly by the arts of peace.

There is still one remarkable circumstance, per There is still one remarkable circumstance, perhaps not yet sufficiently understood in this quarter of the world, where, however, so much is known, namely: That these two nations differ slightly in the principles on which their social organization is based, while on the other hand, the extent of coase which separates and divides the extent of ocean which separates and divides them seems destined to keep them strangers to each other. On the other the democratic affinities of their institutions tend to draw them to one ties of their institutions tend to draw them to one another. For this reason, Mr. President, I hope and believe that you will find in my presence near you, and in the formal assurances which it is my mission to offer you, a new proof of the cordial and sincere attachment of my sovereign for you personally as well as the clearest evidence of the fraternal sentiments of the Ottoman people towards the great nation of the United

For myself, Mr. President, need I add that family ties and relationships render doubly dear and agreeable to me, the mission which my august master has deigned to confer upon me, and all I would ask as a proof of the kind con-sideration which I venture to hope you will be disposed to accord to me in the future, is to permit me to feel that, after having traversed nearly all the old world and the ocean, to reach the hospitable shores of the Union to find myself again, as it were, in my own country.

The President replied:

Mr. Blacque:—Your respected sovereign was right in supposing that your intimate personal relations would secure you special kindness on the part of the people and Government of the United States. You are, indeed, cordially wel-

Although our country is far removed from the Turkish dominions, yet the United States have Turkish dominions, yet the United States have kept a diplomatic representative at Constantinople for the last thirty-six years. During that time not only commerce, but also intellectual religion and social intercourse has largely increased throughout the world. Merely the accidents which happen to individual citizens in such frequent intercourse, render our representative in the East a necessity of government, while those who go out from any region always cherish anwho go out from any region, always cherish ancient memorials and affections. Those who remain at home are not inquisitive about the emigrant and exile, and it was not, therefore, unnatural, yet we thought it unfortunale for the Turkish Government that it delayed so long to reciprocate our mission.

The American people appreciate, and are happy in all cases to acknowledge acts and demonstrations of amity and friendship. Our traditional sentiments towards France, Russia, Holland and Switzerland are proofs. Need I say, therefore, that it gives me peculiar pleasure to be able to convey directly to your sovereign, through your good offices, an acknowledgment of the satisfaction which this government has experienced in finding that, although the Sultan of Turkey has not, at any time, had a Representative here, yet that every reasonable appeal, which reciprocate our mission. Turkey has not, at any time, and a representative here, yet that every reasonable appeal, which we have had occasion to make him, through our agent at Constantinople, in defence of national rights, or for the protection of American citizens, has been kindly, fully and generally answered by the Ottoman Porte.

In the recent civil war in the United States, which tenying their appends a well as at which inspired their enemies, abroad as well as at home, with new and desperate animosity, the Sultan stood firm in his fidelity and friendship. I cannot but think that his fidelity will for all time be marked as an honorable distinction, in the history of the Turkish Empire, as it will accurately be remembered here.

Mr. Blacque, it is not unknown in Turkey or elsewhere that the people of the United States freely lend their sympathy and moral support to the causes of political reformation throughout Congress and the Executive, and all departments of our government, indeed, are in ony on the subject.

We are not inattentive observers of the efforts which the reigning Sultan, like some other leading powers, is making to alleviate the burdens of government, to improve the resources of the thoroughfares of the Empire, to diffuse and elevate education, and to bring ancient institutions, com-mercial, moral, social and religious, into better accord with those of modern western civilization.

In the prosecution of these efforts he may be assured that he will constantly receive a frank just, and friendly moral support from the United ALDERMAN BEITLER.—We are glad to know that Alderman David Beitler is a candidate for reelection in the Ninth Ward. He has served the community so well, and has indeed been such a model alderman in all respects, that it is to be hoped that the citizens of the Ninth Ward will have the good sense to take care that he is renominated in due form and in due form re-elected. The office of a Philadelphia alderman the trees there there is no much disrepute by some has been brought into so much disrepute by some of the unworthy occupants of it that it is especially important, where it can be done, to maintain its respectability by continuing in office men like the present faithful, courteous and very cificient Alderman of the Ninth Ward.

CARPETINGS .- Messrs. Leedom and Shaw, the well-known wholesale and retail dealers in carpetings, have just opened at their store, No. 910 Arch street, a full and complete assortment of foreign and domestic goods for the fall sales. Persons desiring to obtain anything in the way of carpetings for the winter, cannot do better than call upon this enterprising firm. Their prices are as low as any, and their immense stock affords to purchasers a rare opportunity to make selections.

A Book THIEF.—A young girl named Ann Donohue was before Alderman Shoemaker last evening upon the charge of larceny. It alleged that she went to a factory at Front street and Columbia avenue, and helped herself to a lot of blank books and other kinds of books. Subsequently she went into a house at Germantown avenue and Master street, and took an album from a table. She was then arrested. She was held in $500 bail to answer at court.

SUNDAY EXCERSIONS .- A very pleasant way of spending an afternoon or evening is by an excursion on the river. On Sundays the steamer John A. Warner leaves at 1.45 and 6 o'clock P. M.; the Pilot Boy at 9 A. M. and 2.30 P. M. The Forrest has commenced her usual trips, and will leave on Sunday at 8 A. M. and 2 P. M. The Gloncester boats leave South street wharf every Robbing A Boy.-Barney Shannon, said to be a Schuylkill Ranger, was arrested yesterday in West Philadelphia, and was taken before Alderman Allen, upon the charge of having stolen $15 from a boy, who had been sent with the money on an errand for his father. Shannon was committed for trial.

ASSAULT WITH A KNIFE.-Michael Gallagher was arrested last night at Baum and South streets. for being drunk and annoying the neighborhood. When taken into custody he drew a kuife and endeavored to cut Officer Bewley. His wife, Maggie Gallagher, then came out of the house and attempted to rescue her husband. Mundy, the well-known agent of the Camden and Atlantic Railroad, will agent of the Camden and Atlantic Kairoad, will give a moonlight excursion to Atlantic City. Passengers can leave here at eight o'clock tonight and return so as to arrive in Philadelphia at 6 A. M. on Monday. The fare for the round trip is only $1 50. This will be an unequaled opportunity to visit the sea-shore, and spend a whole day, without interfering with business hours.

A BAD GIRL. - Mary Wallace, aged 10 year was sent to the House of Refuge yesterday by Alderman Swift, for begging pennies and behaving badly in the neighborhood of Eleventh and Pine streets.

CITY NOTICES.

WHEN we are paid to be charitable there should be none others than the most liberal of donors amongst us. And such is really the case according to the plan advertised by the Washington Library Company, who have nobly interested themselves in behalf of the Riverside Institute. This company have issued a series of fine steel-plate engravings which they put on subscription at prices much below their retail value, with an additional inducement of awarding $300,000 worth of presents among those who subscribe. That is, for one dollar you receive an engraving worth, at retail, one dollar and a half; also one share of stock which guarantees one present, there being no blanks How any association can afford to act so liberally may seem strange, but to those who would be enlightened we say visit the principal office, No. 1225 Chestnut street. and examine for yourselves the handsome engravings which are on exhibition day and evening.

For comfort, convenience and economy no single article is more absolutely indispensable to every dwelling-house in our country than the celebrated cooking range, known as "Wood's American Kitchener," for sale by Messrs. James P. Wood & Co., at their warerooms, No. 41 South Fourth street. Among the multitudes of these invaluable "Kitcheners" in use among persons of our acquaintance, we know of not one that does not give the most unqualified satisfaction. It is a great economizer of fuel, and as a baker it has no rival. No dwelling can be called complete without of Port Wine, strongly recommended for medical purposes, which are calculated to do more harm than good, having little else than the name to recommend them. Such, however, is not the case with the Port Grape Wine, advertised by Mr. A. Speer, of Passaic, N. J. We have seen his vineyard, and the wine in process of manufacture, and know it to be pure juice of the Whitman & Co., the famous confectioners of No. 318 Chestnut street, below Fourth, who get up the most delicious packages of fine confections for the convenience of those who desire to take them to the country. Their fine Bon-bons, Cream Fruits, Roasted Jordan Almonds, Chocolate preparations, &c., &c., are peerless in daintiness, unimpeachable in purity and unexceptionable in wholesomeness. THE developments of American genius are being made every day, and new things are produced to serve the various uses of mankind. The most posment of these triumphs of genius is the American Sewing, Over-seaming and Button-hole Machine of which it can be truthfully said to be the only perfect machine offered to the public. Although only few weeks old, it received for its beautiful combination and over-seaming the highest medal awarded at the Paris Exposition. A fac simile of the medal will be issued in a short time. Tis a great invention. Call at the exhibition rooms, corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets, and see for yourself.
