This is inevitable in the natural course of things. If the Sultan is a thoughtful man, he must have perceived that Christianity alone, with its elevating, humanizing and equalizing tendencies, has made the greatest nations of the world what they are to-day, while his polluted faith has only served to clog the wheels of progress in every country where it has found followers. It has left its disciples far behind, struggling in ignorance and barbarism, while Christendom has advanced centuries ahead of them. The reform to be introduced by the Sultan may pave the way for the total regeneration of the Turks, and the "sick man" may, after all, gest well. This result is certainly desirable.

THE TROUBLES OF A CONVEN-TION.

The New York Constitutional Convention Large and Important Sales of Valuable Real Estate, September 17th and The New York Constitutional Convention has its hands full in attempting to harmonize the various conflicting interests growing out of the peculiar relations of New York city to the State at large. The city is so notoriously the State at large. The city is so notoriously corrupt that special legislation, which is not necessary for the rural districts, is needed for it, and among the latest sources of trouble to the Convention is the attempt to make a contitutional reform in respect to the conventional reformation of the trade to the large sale of Boots, Shoes, Brogans, &c.
