MENT OF ARTS.

September 4, 1867.

The Trustees of the University have authorized the Faculty of Arts to make certain changes in the course of stadles required for the degree of Bachelor of Arts. This will enable all, who desire such a liberal education as will fit them, whether for pressional or other pursuits, to secure it, under a pian of elective studies, which will offer to the student all the advantages either of the system which formerly obtained, or of that generally regarded as the more practical.

formerly obtained, or of that generally regarded as the more practical.

While all the advantages of a thorough scientific and classical course will be continued, as heretofore, to these who desire it, the new plan provides that the student at the beginning of the junior year, may elect, in the place of advanced Greek and Latin studies and the higher branches of Mathematics and Physical Science, a more extended course in the English language and its Literature, in History, Science as applied to the useful arts, and in the French, German, Italian, and Spanish languages.

The object of the Trustees in making these clanges in the College course, is to provide in the University full and complete opportunities for acquiring an education that will either, on the one hand, satisfy those whose tastes lead them to the highest cultivation of the ancient languages and their literature, of physical science, and of pure mathematics; or, on the other, to meet the wishes of those who desire to be fitted, by a thorough practical education, for an earlier cutrance into active business dife.

Washington Correspondence of the New York Tribune. Washington, Friday, Sept. 13, 1867.—For several days past, men here who enjoy the reputation of being confidential advisers of the President, have been giving out that Johnson has said that he would remain qulet until after the Fall elections. The following, however, which is from the Washington correspondence of a Charleston paper of the 12th instant, is significant for the reason that its author is a writer for the President paper of the 12th instant, is significant for the reason that its author is a writer for the Presi-dent's organ here, and a warm friend of the Pres-ident. He is an old Democratic politician and Seccessionist, who, when Buchanan ruled at the White House, was honored with being called in

The President is expected to act upon his new line of operations in the course of a week, before he leaves for the Antietam Monument celebration. He is to issue the Annesty Proclamation, eject Mr. Seward from the Cabinet, and invite Postmaster-General Randall to resign. It is also asserted that another proclamation, following up that of September 3d, about civil supremacy, will be insued explained the private the private the residual of the proclamation. will be issued, applying the principles therein asserted to some very important subjects. That proclamation asserts the Executive power in the broadest terms, and next we are to know what the President will do with it. Of course, it did not require all this parade of constitutional prerogative for the mere purpose of censuring Gen. Sickles for alleged hindrance of a process from the United States Circuit Court of North Carolina. The President has been often adyised and urged by the peace Democrats (Copperheads) to perform some grand coup detat, by which the people would be at once awe-struck and delighted, and thus save himself from the disgrace of causeless impeachment and removal, without resistance. It was even suggested that he would disperse this Fortieth Congress last July, but he was not then up to the mark. There was no stuff in the whole Cabinet for any energetic movement. Beside the President does not always act upon the theories which he adopts. He may, however, if properly supported by those around him, announce in a proclamation, at an early day, or before the meeting of Congress, that it is in his constitutional process from the United States Circuit Court of proclamation, at an early day, or before the meeting of Congress, that it is in his constitutional right and duty to see that the Constitution, as the supreme law of the land, shall be preserved inviolate, and that as the acts of Congress are unconstitutional they are null and void, and shall not be further executed. An issue will, thus be made between the President, who stands on the Constitution, and the Rump Congress, which body is "hanging on the verge" of the Constitution, and claims, in fact, to act outside of the Constitution. The President must, of course, have as an adviser and advocate a bold, strong man, before he can thus set Congress at defiance. Mr. Seward would oppose his new position, Herald.] At nine o'clock General Sickles appeared on At nine o'clock General Sickles appeared on the balcony of the Brevoort House, accompanied by Major-General C. R. Graham, Brigadier-Gen. H. E. Tremaine, Colonel M. W. Burns, Major L. Purdy, Captain R. B. Newkirk, Luettentant-Col. W. F. Scott and Captain M. Stewart, with Gen. G. E. Farnam and other celebrities, some military and others exceedingly civil. General Tremaine introduced General Sharpe, who presented General Sickles to the assembled military and citizens in a brief address, in which he alluded in highly complimentary terms to the services of General Sickles at Chancellorsville and at Get.

General Sickles at Chancellorsville and at Get

General Sickles replied as follows: GEN. SICKLES' REMARKS.
Comrades, Friends and Fellow-citizens: No one could receive this welcome without grateful acknowledgments. It is for me another testimonial of the affectionate attachment of my old comrades; yet another proof of the indulgent regard of my friends and fellow-citizens. I pray you, General Sharpe to accept my thanks for the com-mendation you have bestowed upon my services. And my thanks are a thousand times repeated to this large assemblage for their hearty endorsement of your address. The meeting brings back glerious recollections of dangers you bravely met, of sacrifices you have cheerfully borne, of your fortitude under reverses when many at home were desponding, of your victories nobly won, of your generosity for the vanquished and of your immovable faith in the final success of our arms and in the good Providence which would preserve and perpetuate the republic. I am glad to see you are not unmind-ful of the fraternal ties which bind the old army together in a true and tried brotherhood. Without making these organizations poll-tical, which would disturb their harmony and impair their usefulness, they can do much to promote the benevolent objects of their founders and to secure justice to our old comfounders and to secure justice to our old com-rades and their families. All knoor to the Grand Army of the Republic. [Cheers.] While the Ame-rican people therish in grateful remembrance the fidelity and valor which saved the nation, they will not suffer the sacrifices of long years of war to be wasted. In the prosecution of the war no institution, no party, no man [loud applause] was allowed to stand in the way; in the settlement of the terms of peope the will of the majority of the allowed to stand in the way; in the settlement of the terms of peace the will of the majority of the loyal people represented in Congress cheers must be obeyed by all departments of the government, and by every citizen, every magistrate and every soldier. The destiny of the republic is safe in the and by every citizen, every haghstrate and every soldier. The destiny of the republic is safe in the hands of the men who put down the rebellion. This is not the time nor the occasion for me to discuss any personal or political issues. There are matters of deep interest to all of us, now engaging public attention, about which I should like some day to know your views, and possibly you may desire hereafter to know mine. [Cries of "yes" and cheers.] I shall not refer to my recent service in the Carolinas, any further than to declare that I have obeyed all the orders I have ever received, and that I have faithfully endeavored to exercise the authority I possessed for the welfare of the people committed to my charge, according to the true intent and meaning of the laws which had to govern and regulate my action. Much remains to be done before our beloved country can enjoy the repose and security you won for her at Gettysburg, and Atlanta, and you won for her at Gettysburg, and Atlanta, and Spottsylvania, and Winchester, and Richmond. The enemies who surrendered to Grant, and Sherman, and Sheridan, are now on their parole of honor to obey the laws of the land. They agreed by that parole to accept and abide by the terms and conditions Congress should im-pose for their readmission into the Union, and for such qualified, general or partial restoration of civil rights as should be youchsafed to them.

I believe that parole will kept; but it will only be kept whenever the government, in all of its departments, is agreed in executing in good faith, and without hesitation and without cavil, the laws of the Congress of the United States, passed by the representatives of the people. The will of the people who put down the rebellion must be tried and found wanting, the army of to-dav—the armies of 1865—the citizen soldiers of the Republic, and Grant, their invincible leader, will never falter, never fail.

TRAGIC OCCURRENCE. A Man Attempts to Kill His Mistress---Gives Her Time to Say Her Prayers---She Escapes---He Attempts to Com-mit Suicide.

Still another of those semi-tragic occurrences Still another of those semi-tragic occurrences that frequently occur in our city, in which fascinating women and demented men play the part of principals, reached the ears of the police authorities about 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon. At that time a woman giving her name as Mary Ann Bertram, called at the Twenty-ninth precinct station and claimed protection. In an excited manner she stated that a man named William Rullman, to whom she had borne the relation of a nilstress, had called upon her during the afternoon, at her residence, No. 104 West Nineteenth street, and solicited her company to a house of noon, at her residence, No. 101 West Nineteenth street, and solicited her company to a house of ill-fame on Fifteenth street, and that she accompanied him there. Upon retiring to a private room Rullman locked the door and took two packages from his pocket, one of them containing landanum and the other a five-barrelled revolver, and, placing them before her, said, "This dose is for me, and the pistol for you," at the same time placing the pistol to her head, and telling her that he would give her just three minutes to say her prayers before blowing head, and telling her that he would give her just three minutes to say her prayers before blowing out her brains. The horror-stricken woman, with death staring her in the face, dropped upon her knees and pleaded piteously for life; but Rullman, who seemed in great excitement, was inexorable, evidently intending to carry out his threat. Her screams, full of terror, startled the inmates of the house, who at this juncture tushed up stairs, broke open the door and entered the room. In the confusion which followed the woman ran out and recretted herself in another apartment, hoping secreted herself in another apartment, hoping thus to clude the would-be murderer. Rullman, under the impression that she had escaped to the

under the impression that she had escaped to the street, immediately followed in pursuit, but did not succeed in finding her. Supposing that she had returned to her residence, he at once repaired there, and, reaching her room, informed parties in the house he would await her return. Upon Miss Bertram's arrival home, shortly thereatter, being informed of his presence, she fled to the station-house and made the above statement to Stream Roak, who immediately deepached to Bergeant Roak, who immediately despatched Officer McCarthy to arrest Rullman. On entering the house they were startled by the dull report of a pistol, and hastily assending to Miss Bertram's room, in the second story. found the door locked. The officer demanded admission, and Rullman came to the door and opened it, when he laid down upon the bed evidently in great pain. It was then ascertained that he had shot himself in the left breast, near the heart. The pistol with which he had committed the deed was lying by his side. He was immediately removed to Bellevue Hospital, where, late last evening, he was in a most precarious condition, and it is feared that he will not surrive the wound

Rullman was an employe in the St. Nicholas

BINCKLEY'S PROCLAMATION.

Circular to all District-Attorneys and Marshals of the United States, and to all their Bespective Assistants and Deputies, and to all Persons Holding ney-General's Office.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE, Sept. 10, 1867.—
Sir: I herewith furnish you with an official copy of the proclamatio of the President of the United States, dated the 3d instant, and in the 92d year of American Independence. This proclamation recites in brief the obligations of loyalty to the Republic, and was intended to admonish you, a common with all persons helding any place. the Republic, and was intended to admonish you, in common with all persons holding any place of honor, trust or profit, civil or military, athome or abroad, under the United States of America, and all good citizens thereof, that the Constitution of their country is in force, and that the Government thereunder, with its several coordinate branches, legislative executive and judicial, is the only lawful Government for this Republic, notwithstanding that many well-meaning citizens have in consequence of disturbing events that have, in consequence of disturbing events that have, in consequence of disturbing events that are now happily past, come to look with indulgence upon false and dangerous pretences that the Constitution is not the supreme law of the land, and also the most authentic proof of the will of the people; but that there are powers of government outside of the Constitution which may lawfully violate that instrument and the law medicing surrections. and the laws made in pursuance of it. All citizens of the United States owe allegiance to that nationality, as the same is embodied and organized in the Constitution and such amendments thereof as, having become expedient in the pforces of the country, have been duly made and ratified. But in a special mannerall persons holdsons holding office under the United States are solemnly sworn to support that Con-stitution, and also to bear true faith and allegiance to the same, and to the Government thereunder; and for the greater number of such incumbents at this time it is known that they have been retained or have been placed in their respective offices upon express assurances of zealous loyalty to the Union, which s taken by all men to mean a cheerful obedience to the proper civil authority of the country. But for the functions of your office, which are directly connected with the enforcement of the laws, a lively sense of their sanctity and authority is anticipated. You are requested to acknowledge the receipt of this communication.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

John M. Binckley, Acting Attorney-General.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS.

General Butler on the National Finances. In a letter to the N. Y. Evening Post, General Butler alludes as follows to his views upon finance, "cursorily expressed" and recently published, as compared with those set forth in the speeches of Mr. Pendleton, of Ohio:

"At the time of my reported conversation I had not seen Mr. Pendleton's views, and only a résumé of them, since. The difference between Mr. Pendleton and myself is radical, and cannot well be overlooked without intellectual blindness. Mr. Pendleton desires the Government, by an exercise of its supreme power, to issue an amount of its promises to pay on demand without interest, (that is, legal tenders,) and force its creditors by interest-bearing bonds to take such issue in payment. Of course such issue would at once depreciate the currency, and would be virtual regulation, which I have not fewered and depre-depreciate the currency, and would be virtual repudiation, which I have not favored and do not favor, either directly or indirectly.

"My proposition is that the Government—shall-offer to the country a new loan, secured by interest in currency bonds payable at long date, to which all future issues of Government loans shall be assimilated, so as to make one class of Government sequities, only instead of the Government securities only, instead of the nineteen different classes we have now and with the proceeds of such loan pay off our highest class of interest gold-bearing bonds as they become due; not to increase, and thereby depreciate, the currency, but render the cur-rency and credit of the government more stable, and, therefore, all the more valuable, by reducing the debt by a reduction of interest and increase of taxable property, causing our loans to be taken up in our own country, so that we may not be obliged to pay tribute to foreign capital, as we now do at a rate of interest exceeding three times what they charge their own governments.
"To the assertion of your correspondent that been three times changed by the Government, and that a dollar in silver or a dollar in gold now is not worth so much as the early coinage, to say nothing of legal-tender dollars.

"To the assertion that by this course the public creditor by five-twenty bonds is injured, I reply that I propose to pay him when his obligation falls due in precisity the says of the course of the co that I propose to pay him when his obligation falls due in precisely the same currency or money which the Government has provided for every other creditor, public or private, to be paid in, and that which it is declared, upon the back of every legal tender note he may be paid in, the best and most valuable money which the credit of the country can sustain, bearing relation to-day to gold as 143 to 100—while the money that these five-twenty creditors lent the Government, (being the best which the then credit of the Government could afford,) stood in relation to gold as 200 the best which the then credit of the Government could afford,) stood in relation to gold as 200 and 285 to 100. If the Government pays them in a currency from fifty to one have the cent. better than they lent the Government, of what have they to complain, save that the Government will not tax the people to pay them a userious share; or in other words, will not tax the people to enable the capitalist to make a speculation out of the war necessities of the Government.

out of the war necessities of the Government. "History tells of no Government which has yet paid its creditors all they loaned to it, and thus made them whole; and I doubt whether good faith, good conscience or equity require this Government to pay its creditors three times what it receives from them, with interest at six per cent. on the treble amount. Of course, if any contract to do that be shown, 'the Jew shall have his bond, but not one drop of Christian blood.'

"It is not true that I have 'called for the issue of any more legal-tender notes," save to take the place of bank notes withdrawn from circulation, and thus save the people the interest thereon. I do not intend to argue these questions—only to correct misrepresentation. I beg leave in correct misrepresentation. I beg leave in closing to repeat that I do not propose to depreciate, but to enhance, the value of the currency—not to do injustice to the public creditors but to pay him according to the letter and spirit of his obligation, and to secure him from the danger of repudiation, which will surely follow an attempt at enforcement upon the people by their own votes, of an unjust and unconscionable transaction under the guise of a contract.
