Women should be educated for society with as much purpose as anything else. Will you educate women in order that they may gain a livelihood? And will you not educate them in order that they may become a power? Will you educate them for usefulness in the nursery, the kitchen, and the sick room? And will you not educate them for the parlor where all they are comes into play? Will you educate them that they may teach children? And will you not educate them to sway men? Will you educate some single faculty of theirs for some high employment? And will you not educate heart, in the fine work of shaping character?

Of women teachers, such as they are, there is no lack. Of women philanthropists there are enough. For the present a sufficient ment? And will you not educate heart, in the fine work of shaping character?

Then the materials for conversation: where do they come from? bermaid, inexhaustible as they are, do not quite supply them. The last fashion will go a great way, but will not quite carry a lady through. What a shame it is that so much eloquence should be spent on belts and buckles! If women would only talk about small things in a large way, there would be no small talk even about slippers and gloves. To have a hundred ladies and gentlemen in a going to live a plain, unsophisticated life, bermaid, inexhaustible as they are, do not no small talk even about slippers and gloves. To have a hundred ladies and gentlemen in a room, and to have the ladies discuss what their friends wore at the last assembly!

Women should study history, biography, the annals of social life. They should study history and painting and to talk about music and painting and sculpture. They should cultivate the imagination of the great masters. They should be acquainted with the society in which they live. They should be instructed in the acturent politics of the day.

Surely a social ambition as noble as that I have presented would carry them through studies as delightful as these.
