There died in the poor-house of this to county, and was buried last Saturday at the expense of the public, a woman who was at cone time the wife of the famous Ned Buntline, and at another the mistress of Ben McCulloch, the Texan ranger.

The date of her registry was "July the 26th." The name entered was "Marthal Leguire," but she went by various pseudo-pymes, and was originally a Cuban, born at Havana and raised in New Orleans. Her true name was Maria Cordova.

The Bonny chiefs scolded, and we pushed on, but soon met a mob of hundreds, and further progress was impossible. In vain did Banigo and Calendusi scold and push, and even knock some dusi scold and push, and even knock some down; the others pressed closer together, shouting, barking and gesticulating frantically. After looking at the performance until we got tired of it, we returned to the boats. cance came off with two messengers from the King, inviting us ashore. Guards armed with long sticks stood at the corners of the streets, and the town was quiet. We were conducted to the King's audience chamber. which had ne light except what came in at the door. Chairs were brought, and the hiefs and others crowded in. A beating of drums announced that the King had gone to the jaju house to consult the spirits before Fibia appeared. He was a strongly-built man of 45, with a round, good-natured lookby an exceedingly coy modesty that defied assault.

Buntline—before he came to Nashville and was involved in the fearful tragedy that is associated with his name—lived a thriftless, dare-devil life in Texas, on the prairies, upon the Gulf coast and about New Orleans. He was a handsome young fellow, of obscure origin, ready talent, neat address, and varied accomplishments.

His meeting with the pretty cigar girl was an accident, and his suit was long and difficult. At last, he had to marry her, and, three weeks after the marriage the couple suddenly disappeared.

His disappeared.
