EVENING BULLETIN.

Monday, October 28, 1867.

VALLANDIGHAM.

It may well be doubted whether there is any phase of human nature which is so sublimely impudent as that which forms the central element in the composition of an educated Copperhead of the better class. There is a fine arrogance about him, a patrician magnificence, a noble and lordly contempt for the ordinary position which he occupied in the rebellion, a jaunty assumption of equality with honest, loyal men which are wonderful to contemplate. That which are wonderful to contemplate. That which are wonderful remarkable feature of Copperhead character is just now having a notable illustration in Ohio, where the notorious and infamous Vallandingham has set himself up as a candidate for the Senate of the United States! Utterly intoxicated with the measure of Democratic success in that State, he has unleashed his malignant hatred of the Union, and is relieving himself by frantic speeches of a mass of rhetorical stuff which should certainly make him feel ashamed of it when he leaves the reader at a loss to understand how so much venom and so much amazing selfconceit could exist within the heart of a single Copperhead.

Last week, Vallandigham gave one of these exhibitions at Mount Vernon. It was a strange mixture of rhodomontade, blasphemy, falsehood, disloyalty, egotism, vituperation and impudence. A few specimens will serve to show the choice style of this worthy leader of the Ohio Democracy. Speaking of the officers whom Gen. Burnside, "whose name I loathe to utter," sent to hear one of his treasonable speeches in 1863, he says:

"And they been known, and their mission understood, the scattered members of their worthless carcasses [applause], torn and wrenched and teased by the arms and hands of ten thousand infuriate freemen, would have covered the ground, a prey to lean dogs and hungry vultures, 'keeping and growling over carcass and limb.' [applause.] If vulture and dog could consent to the inhuman repast, they would feed upon flesh as theirs."

Whereupon, the fierce Democracy went off into frantic applause. Another specimen of Vallandigham's rhodomontade concludes with this fine sentence:

"Trust the people, and learn, oh! scurvy politician! those who relieve upon trick and artifice, upon money and bargain, upon falsehood and fraud, upon glass eyes, seeming to see the things that are not; and you, young man, who have the wealthiest device, thyself to affairs of State, that the people, is as the voice of God. [Applause.]"

After demonstrating to his delighted audience that he had been, during the war a compound of Tell, Stauffacher, Winkelried (which sounds like German for William Reed,) Biedermann, Donnerhugel, Bruce, Hampden, Sidney and Russell, "hurling defiance at tyrants and usurpers and deifiers of the holy temple of liberty wherescever found," this charming exemplar of Copperhead impudence clothes himself with the mantle of prophecy. He informs his hearers that all his predictions have come true. His great mission during the war has been "to defeat the attempt to build up a monarchy over the ruins of a free government," and as he glorifies the great services which he rendered to his country during the war, he indulges in the following strain of lofty blasphemy, which would have done credit to one of Milton's rebellious hosts:

"And here, to-day, in presence of twenty thousand freemen of Ohio, on bended knee, and upon his self-same spot, I thank my God that I [he] has been enabled to keep the resolving; and now, in His presence, and before you, my witnesses, I renew the holy vow, and swear by the great white throne, and Him who sitteth thereon, that, slavery having perished, the Union of our fathers, and the Constitution of our fathers, and the liberties secured by them, shall be preserved to us and our children's inheritance forever."

Let our readers remember that this is not the patient, weary, heart-sick, yet wholesouled Lincoln, speaking over the graves of Gettysburg. The words have somewhat of the same sound, but they are profaned and defiled as they come from the lips of a man who from the beginning of the rebellion worked every faculty which God had given him, and every official facility which his fellows had entrusted to him, to destroy the Constitution and the liberties of the people, and to build up that slave-founded monarchy on American soil, which Abraham Lincoln and the loyal men whom he represented and served, crushed beneath their feet. It was in spite of Vallandigham's votes and speeches and influence that the life of the nation was preserved.

The crowning impudence of this speech of Vallandigham's was in its conclusion, in which he boldly asserted the falsehood that two-thirds of the soldiers of Ohio voted the Democratic ticket at the late election. With unblushing front he declared his affection for and devotion to the "Boys in Blue." It is not probable that there were any soldiers in the crowd at Mount Vernon, but Vallandigham affected to believe that there were, and he assured them of his undying fidelity to their interests in these unqualified terms:

"Let me say that all you ever heard, and all you ever read, you may safely credit with healthy thought or word, or deed, at any time, or in any place, or in any station, public or private, to you personally or as soldiers, is totally and absolutely false."

Considering the fact that Vallandigham steadily voted against every appropriation of "men or money" for the army, as long as he had a seat in Congress, is must be admitted that, as a model of cool impudence, he can scarcely be improved upon.

THE RUSSIAN QUESTION.

The news from Italy is very important, and startling from its unexpectedness. During last week the cable despatches gave assurance of the final settlement of the Roman question by the pledge of the Italian government to observe the terms of the September treaty, and to put a stop to the operations of the Garibaldians. Peace was looked upon as assured, and the French journals congratulated the people upon having escaped a long and bloody war, the result of which would have been, at least, doubtful. But Garibaldi suddenly escaped from his captivity and appeared upon the scene at the head of the most insurrectionary troops, and the whole aspect of affairs has changed. We have, strange to say, no information later than Saturday noon, but at that time Garibaldi had received upon his flanks in two columns, moving upon converging lines; had defeated the Papal troops in several desperate skirmishes and had come within sight of the Eternal City.

The French Emperor, true to his threat, had embarked for Rome the thirty thousand troops concentrated at Toulon, and at Civita Vecchia, the Roman port of entry, was also surrounded by the Garibaldians, it is very likely that the first blow will be struck at them by the French, and in force. It may be that Rome is already in the hands of the insurgents, and that the temporal power of the Pope is even now suspended. If this is the case, Garibaldi's object has been accomplished, and it now remains for the Italian Government to accept or reject the magnificent gift which he presents to it. Should it accept, whether the Eternal City is in the hands of the insurrectionists or not, it is difficult to believe that even the faint heart of Victor Emmanuel will quietly submit to French intervention, and stand lily by while Napoleon's troops march in and snatch the prize from his grasp. The consolation of the soldiers at Toulon in a declaration on the part of France that the obligations of the September treaty are at an end, and Italy is free to consummate the ardent wishes of her people for unity. It is not improbable, therefore, that the cable to-day or to-morrow will bring us information that the Italian Government has declared war on Garibaldi, and opposed the invasion of the French. In that case there will be war. Prussia and Russia will probably side with Italy; France will probably side with the single-handed, unless Austria, nearly ruined as it is already, or Spain, accept the championship of the Pope.

Whatever action these powers may take, it is very certain that Napoleon will have his hands full, and will be likely to suffer defeat in Italy, while Russia will probably embrace the opportunity to strike a blow in the East to the disadvantage of the Sultan, who claims Napoleon as his particular friend. In consequence of the extremely unsatisfactory character of the despatches received, it is impossible to do more than conjecture these results, but they seem at least probable, unless the King of Italy is fool to all sense of honor, and dares not resent the insult offered by the French Emperor.

LAY REPRESENTATION IN THE M. E. CHURCH.

The question of lay representation in the deliberative bodies of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has long agitated that powerful organization. As far back as 1827 it caused a split in the church, and for twenty years it has been a bone of contention in the Episcopal branch of the denomination. The Methodist Episcopal Church South long since adopted the principle of lay representation, and the question has recently received a fresh impulse in the Western and Northwestern States.

In these States the vote has been largely in favor of this change in church government, and the laity of the Conferences of the Middle and Eastern States are now moving with a view to bringing a formidable influence to bear upon the General Conference that meets in Chicago in May next. A meeting of lay members of the Philadelphia Conference will be held at Spring Garden church, this evening, to take action upon this important question. A number of eminent speakers will be present.

It is not a little curious that while comparatively ancient denominations like the Episcopal and Presbyterian churches admit lay delegates to their assemblies and conferences, the Methodists, who are generally esteemed more progressive, should still cling to a system that involves among other objections the obnoxious principle of taxation without representation. It is no less curious that the Methodist Church South, should concede thus much to the principle of popular rights, while the same denomination in the free States clings to traditions and usages that, in the popular belief, do violence to the conscientious convictions, and the sense of right, of a large portion of the laity.

The Superintendents of the different public squares of the city have been notified that it is their duty to exclude all improper characters from the premises under their charge, and that they will be held responsible for the failure to perform this duty. As a consequence of these instructions a number of arrests have been made, and the prisoners sent to Moyamensing; but so far as we can learn they have all been lemales. How is this? Are there no thieves and pickpockets, no brutal ruffians, or leer-eyed blackguards whose presence defiles every place where innocence congregates? Had women are a nuisance in the public squares, and they should be excluded from them; but they should not receive the sole attention of the authorities to the exclusion of the vicious males who haunt all public places. If this same police regulation were extended to the streets it would be an excellent thing, particularly if the strong ruffian was not suffered to go unwhipt of justice, while weak, fallen women are shown no mercy. Chestnut street would be a good field upon which to begin this cleansing process, and the well-known blacklegs and thieves who swagger about the neighborhood of Eighth and Ninth streets would be excellent subjects for early strokes.

A neighboring cotemporary concludes that the Paris Omnibus Company is a moneymaking concern, because it runs 700 omnibuses, and the daily receipts average $1,800. This is about $2.60 per bus, a figure which would not allow a very wide margin for profit, unless "horse-feed" and wages are considerably lower in the French Capital than they are upon this side of the Atlantic. On our Philadelphia city railway lines, where the wear and tear of vehicles and horse-flesh are not so great as in omnibus traffic, the cars usually earn considerably more at each trip than is set down above as the gettings of a day in Paris; yet "the high price of horse-feed" compels companies to keep up fares to famine rates. Innocent hay and oats are made to 'cover up an immense deal of corporation greed,' and they form the convenient medium that is thrown into eyes of an inquiring public whenever the question of car fares is revived.

The mild and gentlemanly persons who form the majority of the Peace Commission established by Congress to patch up treaties with the savage upon our Western frontier, have succeeded in effecting satisfactory negotiations with three or four of the tribes which have been most active in inflicting damage upon the whites. These treaties are satisfactory to the benevolent Peace Commissioners, and eminently so to the Indians, but it is very doubtful if they will be so to anybody else. Satanta, the most powerful chief upon the plains, at first utterly refused to agree to the terms offered by the Commission, asserting that he had a right to go where he pleased, without being confined to reservations, and that he did not wish to live after the fashion of white men, or under their rule. He finally signed the treaty under protest. This was done, of course, in order to procure the power, rifles, blankets, and other desirable objects which the Commissioners, in the over-flowing generosity of their hearts, stood ready to present to him. Satanta has the first Indian to strike a blow upon the occasion of the outbreak of hostilities last year, and during that, and the present campaign, he has been the most violent and bloodthirsty, as he is the most able, of all the hostile savages. Under the cover of this treaty he will retire to his reservation and enjoy himself with that dignified grace which becomes a "big Indian," until spring, when he and his followers will sally out once more and wait under it necessary, by direct cruelty, for Congress to send out a lot more of mild-mannered gentlemen to remonstrate with them, and to present gifts of their ways. The fact is, we must attack these Indians in their winter quarters, when they are comparatively defenceless, if we wish to put an end to their warlike operations. The uselessness of treaties has been proved over and over again in years past, and the policy which Congress now savages with powder and ball, under any circumstances, is suicidal.
