Balthough I had triumphed over the enemy, I had suffered in the conflict; my hollow cheeks and attenuated limbs testified to its severity.

My doctor said I was consumptive, and advised my immediate return to England. I acted upon his advice.

Behold me once more in New York. The journey from New Orleans, inland, is failing or the conflicting what Mrs. A—after my arrival that I decided on sending for had said in praise of Dr. B—, I sent for him. He came, and I found him, if not the paragon Mrs. A— had represented him, a physician of more than ordinary abilities, and of very good manners withal. After prescribing for me, and receiving the customary fee of two dollars, he was about to leave the room, when a few words from me nailed him to the spot. They were these:

"Pray, doctor, is Mrs. A— still in New York."

"Pray, doctor, is Mrs. A— still in New York."
