The San Francisco correspondent of the Chicago Tribune writes, under date of October 21:

"We have already had one smart shower, nearly half an inch of rain falling, and there is every indication of an early setting in of the rainy season on the Pacific Coast. The weather this year has been unusually fine.

Stakement of the Association published in compliance with the Provisions of an is every indication of an early setting in of the rainy season on the Pacific Coast. The weather this year has been unusually fine, and the farmers especially have been blessed beyond precedent. Not only have the crops been unusually good, but the prices realized have been highly remunerative. An early rainy season, which would allow them to do their ploughing in January at the latest, and get their crops in at once, would be another godsend, and they have fair promise of it. At the time I write it is almost winter in Illinois, and the trees have already shed their foliage, and I can hardly persuade myself that it is not really spring time here, so bright and warm is the sunsnine, and so fresh the blooming flowers and shrubbery in the gardens. I have nine or ten varieties of roses, fuschias, heliotrope, passion flowers, geraniums without number, pinks, gladiolus, &c., all in full bloom in the open air; and the Australian creepers and other vines are growing as I have never seen them growing before. A grape-vine has grown over one inch per day for the last sixty days, and is growing apparently faster than that at this time, not shedgrape-vine has grown over one inch per day for the last sixty days, and is growing apparently faster than that at this time, not shedding a leaf, but constantly putting out new ones. The shower two weeks since did great injury to the grapes, destroying the bulk of the finer varieties which were being dried for raisins. The raisin business was rapidly extending all over the State, and this check was a bad one."
