This action has caused considerable excitament among the dealers in this class of articles, and after is some heatitation on the part of customers to purchase, on account of the alleged infraction of the law, American accounts to the Internal Revenue Law, approved March 4th. 1857, exempt "canned and preserved wegstables and finits." By a special decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the action of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the action of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the act of March. served vegetables and internal Revenue, the act of March, 1867, is held to apply to pickies and preserves. Such sarticles in this line of trade as mustard, sauces, syrups, jams and jellios are not exempt under the law, and are all regularly stamped, at least by the leading dealers. We make this statement to correct a misappreheasion which has created some confusion and distrugt, between the manufacturers and their customers.
