But now Vesuvius is in flames, the earth trembles, and one of the How Princess Sophia Lost Her Hus-band—The Cruel King of Prussia. We clip the subjoined romance from the Paris chronicle of the Court Journal: most sublime spectacles on earth is presented It seems churlish, while we have an Emto our eyes.

All summer long the veteran guides of Naples have hinted to visitors that an eruption was at hand, basing their predictions upon absorvations and experiences of which the observations and experiences of which the ordinary tourist can know nothing. But, as and the young King of Bavaria, whose sum ordinary tourist can know nothing. ordinary tourist can know nothing. But, as usual, these predictions were regarded as mere traps to induce travelers to stay awhile longer at this most scenic, most jovial and most enjoyable of Continental cities, and were listened to with incredulous smiles and shakes of the head. When the autumn came the attention of the guides and of everybody over fears were entertained by the governieign, known as the great match-maker ment that the returning Garibaldians and their friends at Naples, already disaffected towards the King, would at once undertake a revolution, and it was whispered about that Mazzini was on hand to head the movethat Mazzini was on hand to head a revolution, and it was whispered about that Mazzini was on hand to head the movement. In fact, two or three émeutes did occur, but nothing serious, and the government had so strengthened the garrison of the city that any rising short of a general revolt city that any rising short of the accommodation of the citizens of Wilmington and and Company to the battle of Sadowa, when the Bavarian and the Managements have been made with the Philadel company to the arrangements have been made with the Philadel Company to the arrangements have been made for the arrangements have been made for the arrangements have been made for the arrangement shave been made with the Philadel Compa when Pompeii was smothered and Herculaneum choked out of existence by an eruption as sudden, but much more terrific than this. Mount Vesuvius, you will remember, is about ten miles from Naples, and the mountain proper is about twenty-four hundred feet high, ascending by a very gradual slope. But from the top of the mountain, perched nearly in the centre, rises a truncated cone fifteen hundred feet high, and this contains the crater of the volcano. The eruption of 1838 gave the interior of this sides varying in thickness from five hundred test deep. The present eruption has not yet changed this form, and the new craters have not greatly modified the inharmonious discords" on the top of the Righi. Wagner had ited the heated atmosphere of the Court, to innale the pure air of the mountains, and the King had sworn to other adjacent hills.

Last night, however, as if jealous of these counter attractions, and tired of its long inaction, the famous volcano suddenly burst forth in a glory of smoke and flame. Everybody was taken by surprise. All Naples was in a state of excitement. Signor Palmieri, the superintendent of the national observatory, who ought to have anticipated the reruption and been upon the spot with his instruments, started at once in haste for the mountain, to record scientifically the progress of the phenomena. He found ten new craters formed, or in course of formation, in and the King had sworn to bring him back in triumph, just as his grandfather brought back the lovely Lola Montez. This was accomplished to the satisfaction of both actors in the musical authorities of drama, but not that of the people; and so a family council was held, at which were convoked the greatest medical authorities of Munich, when it was decided that King Louis II. must be compelled either to abdicate or marry! Of the two evils the King cate or marry! Of the two evils the King chose the greatest, and accepted with gratically the progress of the phenomena. He found ten new craters formed, or in course of formation, in and teres formed, or in course of formation, in and side itself with joy when the betrothal was believed to the first of the mountains, and the King had sworn to bring him back in triumph, just as his grandfather brought back the lovely Lola Mental Core Algiers.

Mitche near the great central crater. These new craters are small at present, averaging five or six in diameter: but they constantly throw out red hot stones and cinders, and slowly vomit forth boiling lava. The lava now pours into and upon the central crater; when that is filled it will roll down the sides of the mountain, as in the days when Pompeii was smothered and Herculaneum choked out of existence by an armterior of the cone. At any moment, however, the demon who groans beneath the mountain in his burning bed may transform the whole exterior of Vesuvius.

Such outbreaks as this which we are now nearly that the preliminary conducts have been smashed by the people, so great is the indignation excited by this extraordinary conduct; but what is more extraordinary still, a society has been formed in Munich, for avenging the Princess, whose misfortune is attributed or the line. special was knocked down at Sixth and Lombard combined phenomena of red-hot stones, cin-
