Altogether it was one of the most fearful storms which ever visited this port, and the range of the typhoon spread over a large distance. Canton narrowly escaped being exposed to its full fury. The following questation from the same paper of September 27, will perhaps give a better idea of the scene within the harbor than any description of my own.

CHRISTMAS CAROL N. A. P. God give ye merry Christmas-tide, Ye gentle people all, And in your merry-making may No evil chance befall. Rejoice! for once at Bethlehem, While shepherds knelt to pray, Our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ, Was born on Christmas day. Ye hang the twining wintergreen; The blazing back logs light
The sparkling tree, while in the Old age and youth unite.
But in a stall at Bethlehem,
Where simple shepherds lay,
Our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ
Was born this blessed day. The wintry wind blows chill against The wintry wind blows chill against
The hovel's creaking door;
Hard by the hearth the driven snow
Lies dritted on the floor.
And cheerless once at Bethlehem
The lowly manger lay,
Where Tesus Christ, our blessed Lord,
Was born on Christmas day. God give ye merry Christmas-tide, And give ye all to see How blessed 'tia to give, and know The grace of charity. Rejoice! for once at Bethlehem, To give his life away,
Our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ,
Was born this blessed day. A Distracted Hussar. "Gussie, darling, Sir Frederic I "Is he? Oh, how delightful! I shall go at once. You must exand allow Lily to finish the game with you.
She plays very well." Out of the room bounced Miss Augusta Gaythrope, hurrying down stairs with a velocity which sorely eopardized the most lovely neck fair maider ever possessed. She had just been engaged in a realization of the most quietly humorous and delicious aketch that John Leech ever drew—"Playing eighteen to Prederic's love."
Who does not remember it? In this case the plissful Frederick was a handsome cornet in the 10th Hussars, and the fair and amiable cousin playing eighteen to his love was the young lady who had just bounced out of the billiard-room at Gaythrope Hall. A hand-some cornet was our blissful Frederic, the to which his sponsors, with whom he was personally unacquainted, had prefixed Archibald Henry. Archibald Henry Frascr, cornet, was not a man to be elbowed! The moment forgetful of Lily Gaythrope's presence. "I should like to sit upon that fellow's head and smother him," he observed, pre-General!" exclaimed Lily-ne was always called general or field-marshal-"Generable creature unmarried—there are few married men more to be pitied than I am. But tell me, tell me, please, is this Sir Frederick a myth?—is he a reality or is he

"Halloa, Fraser! what on earth is the matter with you? Where the dickens are you going? Now don't tear at that handle as if you wanted to wrench it off. Leave it alone, or else turn it the right way."

"Why the deuce don't you open it for me?"

"Holloa, General Fraser. The very man I want," said the old squire, coming into the hall. "I want you to come and make the "Hallos, Fraser! what on earth is the some cornet was our blissful Frederic, the owner of the pra-Adamite name of Fraser, to which his sponsors, with whom he was to which his sponsors, with whom he was see that I'm in a hurry?" personally unacquainted, had prefixed Archibald Henry Frascr, cornet, was not a man to be elbowed! The moment that Augusta ran out of the room, the hussar laid down his cue and gazed out of the window. In this position he remained for three or four minutes without speaking, apparently forgetful of Lily Gaythrope's presence.

"I should like to sit upon that fellow's head and smother him." he observed here.

"Oh, yes, general; I see all that. But I should particularly like to know the reason of this unceremonious departure. Now don't wake such a noise. Frascr, leave that handle alone, confound you! Where on earth are you going with that carpet bag, its mouth wide open, like your own? Now, I will not let you go." The cornet at this moment got the door open, and was about to evapore to great desire to make his acquaint-ance. If you'll excuse me—"

"I am afraid, Mr. Gaythrope, that I have no very great desire to make his acquaint-ance. If you'll excuse me—" sit still, Fraser, or I'll throw a jug of water over you. Be quiet, man; be quiet, and loose that yawning carpet-bag."

"Proud?" The hussar smiled, stroked his moustache, and ahem'd, presently observing, "Well, Sir Frederic, I hope there's not much about this humble cornet to be ashamed of?" yawn, I shall say so."
"Well you are cracked, general, beyond Frederick a myth?—is he a reality or is he merely a phantom called up every now and then to distract and make me jealous?"

"He is a most substantial myth, I assure you; six feet high and quite as heavy as papa."

"And does your sister love him, Miss Gaythrope?".

"Well you are cracked, general, beyond doubt. Now please to explain the cause of this extraordinary conduct."

"I'm going to the station, Frank; so please to let go my carpet-bag, and get out of my way."

"I'm going to the station, Frank; so please to let go my carpet-bag, and get out of my way."

"I shall do nothing of the kind. Give me that carpet-bag, and sit still. Let the bag go, man."

"Why, you're a funny fellow this morning, Fraser," observed the squire.

"I assure you, Mr. Gaythrope, I've been feeling anything but funny this last hour."

Varily, he spoke the truth. But what think you, most excellent reader, was the that carpet-bag, and sit still. Let the bag go, man." Gaythrope?".

"I believe she is very much attached to him, and that he doats upon her."

Architald Henry Fraser looked wild. He had loved with all the depth of passionate affection for months and months, and various little inexplicablenesses had all but convinced him that his love had found a home in the heart of her he worshipped.

"It's all up with me now. Oh, that I were a boy going to be flogged! Oh, that I were a boy going to be flogged!
