ABRAHAM LINCOLN. BY F. B. CARPENTER. (From the Independent.) GROSS CALUMNY RESURED. The charge that President Lincoln indulged in unseemly levity on the battle field of Antietam, calling for ribald songs and vulgat A Had I an important law case, and desired an opinion in five minutes, I would not value piness of marriage with a member of the club. One of the most important of these club. One of the most important of these the matter careful consideration, and would then give his opinion, I would rather have it than that of any living man. His opinion thus obtained was never broken down in our Courte,"

Believing this charge to have been a maligof Mr. Lincoln's character; and I am now is calumny.
Its author was Mr. Joseph Scovill, the the heart be also." New York correspondent, during the war, of he London Herald and London Standard, replied: "There is another version of that, Mr. McCulloch, The same book says: whose letters, over the signature of "Man-hattan," will be long remembered by the American public for their virulent disloyalty

Mr. E. H. Jenny, a well-known citizen of New York city, met Mr. Scovill in Carleton's book store shortly after the publication of the letter containing this charge. He said to him: "Scovill, how came you to write that nonsense to the London press about President Lincoln at Antietam?"

"Why," replied Scovill, "it was intended only as a joke. I received," he continued, "ten pounds sterling for that letter. I have to put just such stuff as that in my letters to please such fellows as they are "over there."

Mr. Jenny fortunately put this statement in writing soon afterward, and has thus en record the very words of the conversation.

Subsequently Scovill wrote a letter to the London Herald purporting to give an account of General Grant's advance toward Richmond; and so grossly misrepresented the letter of the latter for the latter forms of their rigorous companions, see the spindle shanks their flying dresses display, with their weak and slender muscles: or where the Richmond; and so grossly misrepresented the battle of Spottsylvania that when the letter came back to this country, as published both in the London Herald and London Stand; calves to their fair owners." calves to their fair owners." ard, General Dix wrote Scovill to consider This club, which bears a peculiar resemhimself under arrest, and report at his office.

Scovill subsequently exhibited his "order of arrest" to Mr. Jenny at the Controller's office of the city of New York; and in answer to inquiries as to the nature of the perfection. This is done in order to show the pseudo-fair Charges against him, replied: "My account of Grant's fighting on the Rapidan and at Spottsylvania." When Mr. J. suggested that it might be his slander of President Lincoln at Antietam instead, he replied: "That was intended only as a joke; nobody believes it here; it was written to please those fellows over there," reiterating his assertion that the letter containing the fabrication "produced him £10 sterling."

MR. LINCOLN'S LOVE OF MUSIC. Speaking of music, Mr. Lincoln once said fections of the statues and pictures will placed near by them, where they can be readthat he had little knowledge of what he charily examined and referred to. The standard development of the female form finally acterized as "scientific" music; but he always detected and enjoyed what he called the adopted will also be plainly inscribed on mar-ble tablets in the vicinity of this exhibition "sweet strains" in any description of music. His preference was for simple songs and balor comparison, measurement and illustration. Twenty-six inches was the lowest allowable Years Ago." He sought for music that would measurement even hinted at for the waist poem—
"Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?"

But in this he was recommended by proud?" But in this he was never successful. His own vantages under which the existing generation recitation of this poem left nothing to be deired.

I remember well his coming down to the 'Red Room," where there was a plano-forte, rule could be raised hereafter when desirable, with a party of visitors, one morning in the summer of 1864, to hear one of the number, was self evident. They desired to be generated who was a fine singer, render the stirring themselves as might be. The proper measure—bymh, then recently published:

The singing of this hymn at this time, with its background and accessories—the desolate nation mourning her slain, the flower of the land, yet again responding cheerfully to the call of her chief—that chief himself sitting with patient, pensive, eyes and bowed head, listening as if to catch the voice of the people (his statue might well represent him as ever thus listening), all together formed a scene unlike to, but suggestive of that other scene immortalized by French artists, the singing for the first time, by Rouget de Lisle, of that grandest of all hymns of liberty, "La Marrell known, we doubt not, to all dressmakers, and we are sorry to Early in the day, after his arrival, he sent in his card, but the President surmised his errand, and the day wore away while he gave audience to other callers. At 3 o'clock he ordered the office door to be thrown open, and the waiting throng admitted. As they came in, completely filling the room, Mr. Lincoln said: "I will first see Gov. The stand at 2 o'clock, precisely, was occupied by the city clergy, the Mayor and City Council, the railroad officials, and the choir of the different churches. Fully 8,060 spectators stood in front and around the platform. The greatest solemnity pravailed, and sadness was depleted on each countenance. The services were conducted in the most impressive manner, in the following order:

Invocation; reading of the Scriptures by Chaplain Cook; singing, "I would not live always," under the direction of Mr. Bixby; prayer by the Rev. Dr. Headock; addresses by the Rev. Dr. Lord and Hotchkiss; singing, "Solema, sounds the funeral note;" benediction by Rev. Dr. Muller.

At the close of the ceremonies in the depot, a procession was formed in the following order:

A detachment of police; the Mayor and Common Council of Buffalo; the clergy, in carriages; the wagons of the American Express Company dressed in mourning (drawn by four bay horses, and flanked on either side by pall-bearers), containing the remains; thirteen carriages, containing the railroad officers and citizens.

The procession was flanked by police, and proceeded up Exchange street to Main, up Main to Niagara, cock; addresses by the Rev. Drs. Lord and Hotchkiss; singing, "Solema, sounds the funeral note;"
