KILTS VS. TROWSERS.-The 78th Highlanders, now stationed at Montreal, are having a severe test of their powers of endurance in that cold climate. Although there has been only about three inches of snow, the weather has been extremely cold, and frosted ears and faces are very common. Until a few days ago most of the soldiers wore the kilts, but they are now allowed to wear trowsers, and most of them have so far conceded their natural rights as to adopt the new order. The pipers, however, having objected, are allowed to wear the kilts. Before the adoption of the trowsers the men might have been seen with bere legs, while on their hands they had very large and comfortable gloves. The 78th is the regiment the sound of whose pibroch was
