then suddenly a depth of nine fathoms. Under the circumstances it is almost impossible to land an army either speedily or safely.

If Theodorus had only a little knowledge of military tactics, wouldn't he come down with a swoop and walk off horses, mules, bullocks and camels with gasto; for you must the waiter as anybody else, and said, firmly:

"I beg pardon, sir—are you the waiter?"

To which his neighbor, with equal firmness, respectively. bullocks and camels with gusto; for you must know that a surprise on black soldiers, when they are uncamped, and where there are no European troops to encourage them, would be easily effected, and the Abyssinians are fine, active men compared to our Hindoo soldiers, especially when the latter are uncamped and placed hither or thither without order or vigilance, all their white officers remaining on board the ships, with the custom ary nonchalance of acclimatized Orientals.

Secondly, I notice that for the watering ary nonchalance of acclimatized Orientals.

Secondly, I notice that for the watering of those troops already landed and to come, the sagacious pioneers, in their peculiar inspiration, were of opinion, putting aside all reasonable grounds and ocular proof, that because the ruins of a Greek city are convenient to the camp there must be an abundance of water; but the truth of the matter is that when they landed and came to be actually in want water only enough for three ance of water; but the truth of the matter is that when they landed and came to be actually in want, water only enough for three hundred could be found, and that of an awfully brackish nature. The result of this would have been terrible on the landing of the First Division had it not been that seven or eight chartered, steamers are detained to condense water, it an enormous expense, when they should have been back to Bombay to tow the other divisions in sailing vessels.

About eight miles from the beach there is a very high range of mountains, dividing the desert lying between them and the sea from the interior. This range is, in my opinion, a formidable obstacle to the invasion of the country, as only mules and natives can cross the natural barriers with safety. How an army of ten thousand men, with their enormous host of followers and equipage, including ordnance and pontoons, are to cross, I have no conception. An exploring party of cavalry and sappers is at the approach of the mountains for the present, but I have not keard of any chance of their success up to this day.

I myself, with some friends, have been out in search of sport, but we can only find larger game, such as wild elephants, tigers and bears, with a few deer, hares and gazelles, and less in the way of birds, and this reminds on the content with a party of hunters, six or seven in number. They were Frenchmen, and I can venture to say they were spliciarly.

The Storm in California. SAN FRANCISCO, December 27.—Reports from Sacramento Valley indicate that there has been a flood as Made in best manner, to show materials and styles, now destructive as those of 1861 and 1862. The whole valley was submerged and travel was suspended in every direction. . Several railroad accidents were caused by the tracks washing away, and some loss of life resulted. The American River is higher than ever before known. The levees at Sacramento withstood the flood, and no fears will hereafter be entertained of the safety of the city. The levees at Marysville broke away and the greater part of the city is overflowed. The reads in the Sierra Nevada Mountains are rendered impassable for animals, and the mails and express matter from Virginia and other places in Nevada were carried by men on foot.
