George Cruikshank.

The London Review has a pleasant sketch of Cruikehank, in which the following passages occur:

"Walking the Strand rapidly; or presiding it may be, at a tectotal meeting; or standing upon his legs jauntly, amidst admiring friends, at a club dinner, and returning thanks for "The army, navy and volunteers," may be, seen a middle-sized, broad-shouldered man, in age but yet full of vigor, sharp-nosed, hawk-beaked, eagle-eyed; with smooth, broad forehead and eager look, equally expressive of work, wit, humor and readiness. That man, always remarkable and distinguished in a crowd, began work when nincteen-twentighs of the present world were not born, when eighteen-twen-tieths were not even thought of, when the lease of the proposed in the furnished plates for Cassell's edition of the Sixtinian for the smalls illustrations of 'Jack's Progress to Tyburn' and his execution, with their multitude of figures, will be accomparison with Callot's etchings. PHILADELPHIA. March 16, 1803.

FRIEND BROWN: It gives me great pleasure to say to you, that your Ointment is such an article that theore can be but praises bestowed upon it, when used and it becomes known. For you well recollect how dreadfully I was scaleded in both legs by steam and hot water, so much se that the flesh came off at least one-half inch in thickness; and by the use of your Ointment, and that alone in a faw. that the flesh came off at least one-half men in thickness; and by the use of your Ointment, and that alone, in a few weeks I was entirely restored, and am now as well as ever; not a muscle or leader contracted, and hardly a sear is left. There is no telling the amount of suffering it would relieve, if it was freely used in sealed so burns of any kind. By referring persons to me, I can give thou ample satisfaction of the truthfuluess of its qualities.
