The Otalining of a-more Confedrit X Roads, and, after painful and protracted consultation, the important document was completed and yesterday Mr. Johnson's goode his piece. The reporters were excluded from the presence lest some enthusiastic scribe, carried away by Mr. Johnson's guahing eloquence, might fall to convey to the public the precise language of the Chief Magistrate, and perhaps embroil two great nations in war, by a misplaced comma or a mistaken word. Mr. Thornton entered the august presence of His Excellency, and, with fall ess trepidation than might have been expected from a "plain Mr. Thornton's standing for the first time before the redoubable Johnson, made his bow gracefully and said a few brief words of courtesy, expressing his thanks for the treatment of his predecessor and his loope that he should have a pleasant time of it at the American Court. As Mr. Thornton does not belong to the nobility, his speech was easy and, with one or two exceptions, grammatical. He said "subsist," when he mesmit to say "exist," and he had the bad taste to remind the President that there were "distinct of the community on this side of the Atlantic or the other are there so many families who dwell upon land and sleep beneath a roof that is owned by them. The method is elaborate, as might have been expected. The two nations are to commence a course of constant and careful study. That being accomplished, they are to conform their measures to the political logic which manifests itself in an increasing love of constitutional freedom and the rapid march of common, irresistible and indivisible civilization! There you have it, and the Alabama claims are satisfactorily settled.
