

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Messrs. Hunt & Houghton have published a new book of European sketches, by Mr. Howard Parnis Arnold, author of "Europa Monita." This is a book of sketches, practical and humorous. Studiously avoiding all the hackneyed commonplaces of Arnold's former work, the author has produced a volume which is as well as a pleasure to the reader. The sketches are little more to do with the writer than to serve as a text, from which the country elements may be drawn. There is a good deal of Paris, and a good deal about Switzerland, and Savoy and Piedmont. Mr. Arnold's sketches are as well as to write about it. His descriptions of his scenes and the scene on reaching the summit are sufficiently good examples of his style. The crown of Mont Blanc is a gigantic cone of ice and snow, and the summit is not a flat plain, but a steep slope of ice and snow. The summit is not a flat plain, but a steep slope of ice and snow. The summit is not a flat plain, but a steep slope of ice and snow.
