EVENING BULLETIN. Monday, March 15, 1868.

THE TENNESSÉE TROUBLES. Congress has called for the correspondence between Generals Grant and Thomas, which was first made public by the special despatches of the Evening Bulletin on Saturv last. There is much anxiety and curiosity to know the extent and nature of the troubles in Tennessee. They are evidently sufficiently serious to impose graver respongovernment. It is not at all remarkable or a tax. For it is unreasonable that Mr. Johnson's name should at once be connected with any mischievous usel to abandon his hopeless fight with Congress and the people, he is quite capable of resorting to any wicked scheme which seems to offer a shadow of hope. The hope is desperate enough, and should selves in the attitude of resistance to law just tion. The country is thankful that General Grant stands between it and the danger that dishonest smooths the way for deception.
