THE APRIL MAGAZINES.

THE APRIL MAGAZINES.Another batch of the periodicals for the coming month lies upon our table soliciting attention. On top of the heap—Putnam, in the green cover now become almost historical, commends itself to the editorial glance by the scholarly precision of its typography and the general elevation of its style. "A Paper on Paper," by Schele de Vere, is for the most part historical, "Absohution" is a two-page poem, in blank verse, colored delegate recently expelled from the Georgia Constitutional, Convention, was expelled, not because he had served a term in Btate Prison, but for gross personal insults to members of the Convention. The charges against him had been reported upon by a committee, and Bradley moved that the report be recommitted. During his speech on this motion he made allusions to members so very richest currents of contemporary thought. For example, from Dic Neue Freie Presse has been translated an eloquent essay, being the Austrian view of the Dynasty of Na-poleon. From the French is taken an article on M. Thiers, in his ungracious rôle of Chief we would wish me to do to you, were you in my at the Masin with the translated from the translated for the tra of the Majority: it is translated from the situation. Now, Mr. President, in conclusion Con Revue Contemporaine. The subject of the I would say that I have been very unfortupresent interesting eruption of Vesuvius is judiciously clipped from the Salurday Re-view. That on modern Hippophagy from the Ball Mull Constant (The Cost of Cost) the Pall Mall Gazette. "The Cost of Coal" marks I throw myself on your mercy. is a stirring philanthropic poem taken from The members, white and colored, very St. Paul's. The best story in the magazine is the "Phineas Finn" of Anthony Trollope. We can hardly imagine a more able selection from the files of foreign papers and the from the files of foreign papers and the groups of magazines and reviews than has The vote was then taken on Mr. Cotting's been made by Messrs. Intion" is a two-page poem, in blank verse, by Grace Greenwood. Two clergymen contribute the succeeding articles: C. S. Henry, D. D., an essay entitled "History and its Philosophy," a vindication of religion in the world's story; and J. A. Spencer, D. D., an examination of contemporary Ritualism, as seen during "A Visit to St. Alban's, New York." Then follows Part I. of "The President of the Convention, in the remarks which I was making on that motion, I was York." Then follows Part 1 of Whie Princess Vareda," by F. A. Henry. "Among the Poor Girls," by Wirt Sikes, is evidently the testimony of one who knows; we have never read a one who knows; we have never read a one who knows; we have never read a stronger or more harrowing description of the miseries of needy women in this land where so much is boastingly said of the chivalrous treatment of the sex. Mr. C. W. Elliott's current chapter of "Life in Great Cities" is devoted to Yedo—a name which he takes us all to task for spelling with two d's. Looks takes us all to task for speiing with two us. John S. C. Abbott's pleasant and popular style is devoted to an historical view of Temporal Sovereignty and the claims of Pius 1X. "Resumption," by E. S. Gould, is devoted to a patienal subject of immediate is to the continuous from Gordon and the devoted to a national subject of immediate it to the gentleman from Gordon and the interest. "A Peep into the Netherlands Two President, as they were referred to in it as Interest. "A reep into the Netherlands Two Hundted Years Ago" is by E. A. Duyckink. Mrs. R. H. Stoddard contributes a tale called "Accidents will Happen." The magazine is prefaced and defaced with a cut of Mr. Beecher that is really too cutting, and is pleasantly rounded off at the and with a beccher that is rearry too cutting, and is pleasantly rounded off at the end with a familiar Monthly Chronicle. The Galaxy opens with Mrs. Edwards's story, "Stephen Lawrence. Yeoman." story, "Stephen Lawrence, Yeoman." dent of the Convention or the member from Richard Grant White contributes an able Gordon; and I must have used unfortunate article, "Words and their Uses," which will language to have been so understood. . It was article, "Words and their Uses," which will assist the studies of the amateur etymologist. "The Lowlands of the Mississippi" is by Henry L. Abbott. "The fight at Fisher's Hill," by James, Franklin Fitts. An essay Henry L. Abbott. "The fight at Fisher's Hill," by James, Franklin Fitts. An essay Hill," by James, Franklin Fitts. An essay by John Borroughs, "Before Genius," con-tains this deserved comment on the most prominent European romancer of the day: "Pass, for instance, from Victor Hugo to Deservation as Nature is, and is intent only on the approbation of his own conscience; while Hugo, in his best passages, never for-gets his audience. Abschylus never paints; Hugo perpetually." Gordon the assurance of my warmest friend-ship, but I have made a great mistake iu my use of language. I certainly clid not intend to use the words that are there attributed to me. The gentleman on yesterday spoke very warmly against me, and I referred to the letter which I had received two weeks ago to show that even if I were guilty as has been charged, I was not the only guilty one on the floor, as according to that letter, the President and the Hugo perpetually." John Norton Po meroy prints a fair politi-cal criticism called "The Three Branches of cal criticism called "The Three Branches of Our Government." The editor's "Nebule" are devoted to clouding over the theories of Monsieur Blot, the cook, and to drawing an apologetic shade over the performances of the Boy Mr Three Rev. Mr. Tyng. We receive from Mr. T. B. Pugh the cur-Christ said to his disciples that they ought to mhi. rent number of Hours at Home, edited by forgive seventy times seven, and I ask the J. M.
