HANGMAN'S DAY AT YORK, PA.

Coming Execution of Wm. Donavan

SECOND PROBST.

PARTICULARS OF THE CRIME

Wm. Donayan, the murderer of the Squibb family, is to pay the penalty of his crimes in the prison yard at York, Pa., to morrow. All the preparations for the execution have been made and there is not the slightest probability of executive interference.

The murder, which caused a profound sensation in York county at the time of its perpetration, resembled in some of its details the Deerlug tragedy in our own city. An entire family fell wickims to the cruel blows of the butcher, and plunder was the principal object of the murderer.

victims to the cruel blows of the butcher, and plunder was the principal object of the murderer. George Squibb, a respectable and inoffensive old man of Quaker descent, was living with his wife and grand-daughter, on a small farm situated in a quiet and secluded spot, at the foot of Dare's Hill, in Warrington township. He had owned it for many years, and by strict economy and industry had succeeded in accumulating a small sum of money which he kept in the house, and was in the habit of loaning out to his friends and neighbors as their necessities required. He and was in the habit of loaning out to his friends and neighbors as their necessities required. He was 71 years old at the time of his assassination, and his wife was aged sixty-seven. The little grand-daughter was between eleven and twelve. On the evening of Sunday, the 17th June, 1866, as appearances indicated, about the time they were preparing to retire to bed, the marderer entered the humble dwalling and commenced his bloody work. dwelling and commenced his bloody work. The house is situated about one hundred and fifty house is situated about one hundred and fifty-yards from a public road, leading from the Lisbon road to the road going to Lewisberry, and is dis-tant from the nearest dwelling about five or six hundred yards. It is an old, dilapidated build-ing, constructed of rough logs, but one-story high, and no one who was not ac-quainted with the character and habits of its inmates, would have thought for a moment that they were in possession of any mency whatever. It would have been the last place to which a stranger would have resorted for robbery orgain. stranger would have resorted for robbery orgain. It has but two rooms on the ground floor, the one need as a kitchen and sitting room, and the other as a bed chamber. It was, therefore, pretty strongly suspected that some one residing in the neighborhood, and who was acquainted with the family, was connected with the dark crime.

The murder was discovered on Monday morning, about ten o'clock, and the victims of the brutal outrage must have lain where they were found, during the whole of Sunday night, up to the hour mentioned. George Snelbaker, a grandson of Mr. Squibb, came to the house about ten o'clock to borrow an auger, and was the first person who knew anything of the deed after the murderers had fied. The alarm was immediately given, and the neighbors collected from far and near to witness the awful spectacle and to device some means of bringing the guilty party to justice. George Squibb was found lying face downward, upon the porch, with a pool of congulated blood around him, and his features covered beyond recognition with the same. He was insensible but not dead. He lived until halfwas insensible out not dead. He lived until half-past twelve o'clock on Monday night. There were fourteen wounds on the right side of his head, thirteen of which had penetrated to the twain, and of course he remained perfectly uncon-scious to the time of his death. The little grand-daughter was lying dead in the kitchen, with the back part of her head crushed in, showing that the fiend who robbed her of her innocent life, must have accomplished his purpose by weller. must have accomplished his purpose by using a heavy hammer or some similar instrument. Close beside the corpse of the child, Mrs. Mary Squibb was lying in a state of insensibility and covered with blood. She had three wounds on the right side of the head, one of which produced a slight fracture of the skull.

Mrs. Squibb lingered for several days doubt.

Mrs. Squibb lingered for several days, death not having come to her relief until the 28th of the month. She was unable to speak intelligibly up to the time of her death, although she retained her consciousness, and knew all her friends and acquaintances when they approached her bedside. At the time of the investigation by the Coroner, one of the jurymen took her by the hand and requested her, when he named the person who injured her and murdered her husband and grand daughter, to signify the fact by a pressure of his hand. Several names were mentioned to her before Donavan, but when the name of William Donavan was pronounced, she pressed the hand of the juror, and thus signified that he was the man. She was interrogated in the same way as to the number of persons engaged in the outrage, and signified by the pressures of the hand that

It seems that Donavan, about five years before. n a wanton and cruel manner, beat one of Mr. Squibb's cows so that it died, and Squibb brought suit against him to recover the price of the animal. It was decided in his favor, and when Donavan was obliged to pay the money, he made threats that he would have revenge on Squibb if it were twenty years afterwards. Donavan was an ill-tempered, desperate character, and was the terror of the neighborhood, particularly when under the influence of liquor, which was often the case. Ostensibly, at least, he was the owner of a small protectly on the parth side of Derec Hill early to property on the north side of Dare's Hill, and it is said that several executions were pending against him which he was unable to satisfy. He knew that the Squibbs had money in the house. The wounds upon the heads of the victims were all on the right side, showing pretty conclusively that they were inflicted by a left-handed person, and Donovan is a left handed man.

The supposed murderer was promptly arrested, and bis trial took place at York is the November following. It resulted in his conviction; but for technical reasons a new trial was granted, and this took place in November last. It occupied two weeks, and resulted in the conviction of the prisoner. Judge Fisher presided, and able coun-

The testimony taken by the Court proved that George Squibb and the two other victims were last seen alive and in health by Harvey Bell, the husband of Mrs. Mary Squibb's sister, on Sunday afternoon about four o'clock—the murder was committed between that time and Monday morning, between 10 and 11 o'clock, when the terrible tragedy was discovered. George Squibb was found at that time by George Snelberger, son of Jacob Snelberger, who is married to George Squibb's daughter Maria. He was sent over to Squibb's to borrow an auger, when he saw his Squibb's danghter Maria. He was sent over to Squibb's to borrow an auger, when he saw his grandfather lying on the porch in a pool of blood, and on opening the outer door to search for the rest of the family, discovered the bodies of his grandmother Mary Squibb, and Emma Scifert lying in the room also weltering in a pool of blood. He ran home and informed his parents, and very soon they and a number of neighbors repaired to the scene of the murder, where they found the little girl with the back of her head crushed in and quite dead. George Souibb and crushed in and quite dead. George Squibb and Mary Squibb were still living, but insensible, and both of them remained partially so until the time of their death time of their death.

The Coroner's inquest disclosed the fact that Mr. Squibb had been struck over the head with an apparently sharp instrument, and from the appearance of the wounds on the head of Mrs. Squibb, they were inflicted with the pole of a hatchet or some other blant instrument. Donavan although a comparatively near neighbor, did not go to the house on Monday, when the whole neighborhood was aroused by the report of the murder, nor on Tuesday, when the Coroner's inquest was held, although sent for several times, nor dld he go there until arrested and taken to the house against his own will. The same persons returned with him to his house, when they discovered blood on his pantaloons, and also a hatchet which had been newly ground, role and all, and upon which some traces of blood wore seen. It was also proved that he gave a number of contradictory statements in reference to the manner in which the blood came upon hi-pantaloous and the hatchet. These were the principal circumstances which were offered and proved against the accused.

The testimony left no room to doubt that the murder was a perfect butchery in all its details. The night in which it was committed was dark and rainy. The thunders were loud, and the lightning fearful and vivid. The victims were shout preparing for bed. Mr. Squibb had taken off his hat, his coat, and his shoes and stockings. They were found close by the arm-chair where he was accustomed to place them. The old lady had taken off her shoes and stockings, and the little girl had removed one shoe and stocking—she had not time to finish the work of undressing. The jury seem to have had no doubt of the guit of the prisoner for they returned into court with a verdict after an absence of but a few hours. The prisoner heard the verdict without a perceptible shudder—not a nerve trembled and there was not even a quiver of the muscles of the face. Sulcide in Cincinnati-A Young Man Shoots Himself.

About half-past three o'clock this afternoon, people living in the vicinity of Vine and Longworth streets were startled by hearing the report of a pistol in the rear of No. 21 Longworth, and cries of distress which, upon inquiry, were found to proceed from a room in the second story of to proceed from a room in the second story of the building, where a young man, named Samuel Shotwell, had just attempted suicide by shooting himself through the breast, the ball entering one inch above the left nipple, and producing a wound that will certainly prove fatal.

Drs. Johnson and Judkins were at once sum-moned to the scene, and did all in their power to save the rash man, who had made the desperate attempt to rid himself of the burden of life. Samuel, so his mother informs us, has been sick with something like a gathering in the head for about two weeks past, and has in consequence been in very low spirits; but until this morning none of his friends ever suspected him of an intention to commit suicide. The first intimation his mother had of any such intention was about 10 o'clock this morning, when upon entering his room she found it filled with funes of chloroform, and Samuel lying on the bed in an unconscious state, with a handkerchief saturated with the same over his face. Removing the handkerchief, she applied cold water until he revived, and carefully concealing chloroform, gave herseif no further alarm about the matter, thinking that he had no neans of committing, or making another attempt on his life, but in this she was mistaken, Somuel having, unknown to her, a pistol with which he at last committed the awful deed. Tho family have been living in the city but a few days, having arrived here from Memphis, where Samuel has for several years past been employed as bookkeeper, in the Notion House of M. Belews & Co. At half-past four he was still alive, but cannot possibly survive till morning.

Terrible Tragedy in York County—A Lunque Commits Murder.

A terrible tragedy occurred in the neighboring village of Abbottstown, on Tuesday night of last week, which resulted in the death of a man named Cole. The particulars of the affair, as we have been able to glean them are substantially as fol-lows: Dr. David S. Peffer, a prominent and successful physician, residing in that village, some weeks ago became disturbed in mind, and of late growing evidence of marked insanity had so multiplied that a constant watch over him be-came necessary, as at times he became violent and ungovernable, the paroxysms lasting several days at a time. A stranger sojourning in the village, named Cole, from the State of New York, offered to stay with bim and did so for several days. On Tuesday night of last week, Cole sat up in the room with the Doctor, who appeared to be quiet and manageable. During the night, however, Cole fell askers, and the determined to be the company of the colerance of the coler however, Cole fell asleep, and the doctor noticing it, picked up a pitcher and commenced a furious assault upon him, striking the unfortunate man several terrible blows over the head, fracturing his skull in a horrible manner. The noise of the scuille aroused the inmates of the house, and help coming, the Doctor was secured when it was discovered that Cole's injuries were mortal. He lingered in great agony until Wednesday night, when death released him from his sufferings. The Doctor was conveyed to Gettysburg jail and lodged in one of the strongest cells for safe keeping for the present. His insanity is beyond doubt, and we presume he will be placed in the asylum at Har-

Disaster at Winona, Minn.-20,000 Bushels of Wheat Destroyed.

[From the Winona Democrat of the 28th.] During the terrible storm of Tuesday night, and a little after midnight, the large grain ware-house of McCutchen & Small, near the corner of Walnut street, on Front, gave way and fell to the ground with a terrible crash. It was elevated above the ground about eix feet, and stood on piling, such as some others of our warehouses are built on. The building was one hundred and forty feet long and thirty wide, and contained about twenty thousand bushels of wheat, four hundred bushels of oats, besides considerable other property, which was dumped into a pond of water that had settled beneath and around the warchouse. The cause or causes of this disasteris, or are, merely conjectures; although it is generally conceded that it was on account of the water settling in about the piling, thereby taking the frost out suddenly, and the piles settling at the southwest corner of the building, which, together with the jarring of the continued and tergether with the jarring of the continued and ter-rible thunder, caused it to settle that way; and when once started, the immense weight brought the building down almost simultaneously, crushing the piling and supports beneath, to all appearance, like pipe stems. The sight prepresented by the wreck yesterday was a most pitiable and disastrous one, as the mammoth building and its centents lay in one shapeless mass; the building was broken and crushed into ten thousand pieces, and could be likened only to a mass of fragments. It is a wonder to every one how it could have become so completely wrecked; and what makes it still worse, is the water into which the golden wheat was precipi-tated, which fact will make the loss on the wheat probably three or four times as great as it would otherwise have been. Hundreds of visitors went to see it yesterday, and the owners have the sympathy of the entire community.

The Secolo of Milan announces that a tailor of Milan possesses the identical pair of breeches in which the first Napoleon fought the battle of Marengo. The article of dress, being somewhat the worse for that great victory, was sent to the said tailor to be patched, and as a pattern for a new pair. The man of shears appears to have considered the inexpressibles in question as "past mending," and kept them altogether. It appears that he bethought himself that some hundred years hence they would be considered appears that he bethought himself that some hundred years hence they would be considered as a relic of the young conqueror who was sweeping Austrian armies before him as though they were so much dust, and would be worth money, so he had their identity proved and registered by a notary. Relic collectors (says an English paper) have another opportunity of buying up the old clothes of de-funct royalty. The old King of Bavaria preserved every article he over put on—from his boots to bats, from his shirts to his overcoats—from the year 1823 to the date of his death; and, more-over, with an eye to the instruction of the future bistorian of dress, had each garment entered in a register according to chronological order. He did something more to the purpose, however, for his heirs, as he has left two huadred and fifty milions of money.
