It remained for the counsel to proceed accordingly, if they saw proper.

The above is a habeas corpus case from Florida, the parties having been convicted of murder, and involves points similar to these in the MeArdie case.

Judge Nelson said that a motion was made yesterday by Mr. Black for leave to argue the MeArdie case under the aspect it presents in view of the recent act of Congres. One of the counsel, Mr. Black was not now in Court, but the conclusion of the Court was that if there was no to bjection, the Court would hear the argument at the opening of the Court on Wednesday.

It should here be stated that Judge Black, on making the motion yesterday, said he did not think that the recent act of Congress withdrawing from this court jurisdiction in this class of cases; was of any effect in reference to the McArdie case.

Mr. Carpenter objected to the argument on Wednesday (Gomorrow), As it was a case of much importance he should like more time.
