All this leads many now to ask, is Reconstruction now really desirable? Are we ready for it? Is the South fit for anything but military government for years to come? Whilst murder is the order of the day and assassination is systematized, are we ready from the City Hall to somewhere away out to hand over the Union men and the freedmen into the grasp of their enemies?

was broken down, and the workmen in both mines nick. The lights were extinguished, and we skedaddied, as we heard the reports of gins and pistols reverberating through the long, dark passages. The tight had commenced. We felt considerably relieved upon gaining the surface of the ground and once more beholding the light of day. We learn that the combatants have fortified themselves in the stops and drifts. It is not known on the outside that any one has been seriesely hurt, although it is reported that one man's coat tail was shot off, and another had his fingers cut with a builte. It is feared that something fatal will occur before the affair is terminated, as both parties are well armed. We learn that they have been trying to drown each other out, and it is reported that the las Elmore party are preparing hose by which to eject hot steam and water upon their antagonists. About forty shots were exchanged on Thursday This sort of affairs is to be regretted, We do not prefend to say which party is right or which party is wrong, but unless a compromise be effected, the contest will ultimately be extited in law. If the parties persist in fighting, is there rollway to stop it? In our Sheriff not invested with the power and required by law to stop such proceedings?

General Sherman again occupied a seat on the his argument at 12.15. He commenced by referring to a statement made by Mr. Butler, that the President's letter to the Secretary of the sury notifying him of the suspension of Secretary Stanton, and claimed in justification his au thority under the Constitution. He read the letter, and claimed that it did specify under what

Beccial Despatch to the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.]
WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Impeachment

Democrat, of the 3d, has the following account of an interview with him, and of his doings and purposes, as stated by himself:

Yesterday he paid us a visit of an hour or so, and gave us, in his eff-hand, though exceedingly graphic manner, an outline of the line he has led for the past eix years among the mountains and on the plains of the far weak, in pursuit of the mountaineer's occupation in general, but more especially in search of the red handed Indians belonging to the tribe that murdered his friends in 1892. As bedfore stated, he did not follow them without a purpose, as one hundred and eight of the red-kins have been rent to the happy hunting grounds at the crack of his unerring rifie and by his kees-edged bewe kinfe.

Boon after reaching the Rocky Mountains he attached himself to a company of mounted Free langers, of whom the notorious Bain Collins be commander, and it was during his connection with the band that he accomplished his mission. Collins has been in the mountains thirty years, and Porter describes him as a tall, powerful man, sixty five years of age, with not a gray hair in his head. Over his company of 150 men he has full command in all escential matters, and every can of Ms followers are true to their leader, and love him almost as a child loves its parent. This company subsist by the sale of fur and robes and through the prowess of their arms. They are not stationary at any time, but range all the way from the British lines to New Mexico and Lower California. They are rot me and honoratle friends to all Americans, American trappers and trians, but between them and the Hudeon Bay (Encilsh) for Company, an almost deadly hestility exists. When Sam Collins' party find any of the British trappers trespacing on American territory, they forthwith proceed to "go for them," "While no one on this Continent," says Porter, "is truer to the American flag, no one knows a more deadly hate than their band entertain towards the British lessurcheen, and they never miss an opportunity to the wift. They sel

They spend the winter season in the sout-western country, where they can get forage for their houses and during the summer go north.

Porter says he likes the life of the Mountain Ranger, and as he has no family relatives now living, he will prohably spend his days as a "ranger." He designs leaving St. Paul in two or three weeks, to join Collins at the head of the Xellowatone, as per instructions given in the letter below. pelow.

Note the state of the Yellow Stone as soon as possible, and we will revenge her death.

Note of the state of Mountain Free Trappers.

Porter says that on his return his first labors and efforts will be devoted to the capture of "Roman Nose," above referred to as the mundoire of his sister. He says "Roman Nose," into is sealed, for vengeance, and bitter vengeance upon him, is but a matter of time. He wants the life of the chief and ninety-one others from the Bioux nution, and whom he has accomplished this task, the number will be two hondred, when he says the blood of his friends will have been atoned for and not until then.

After he shall have accomplished this end, be may possible veturn to the States permanently—although he thinks it goutstill. bit return to the States permanenty—attacks.

It doubtful.

Porter's personal appearance at first sight would not attract cepecial attention, but upon a closer scrutiny many remarkable traitemay easily be discovered. He is quite young, certainly not more than tweaty-three—leaving him, at the time he started on the trail, about seventees. He is of rather a sandy complexion, brown, keen even, that seem to be on the night for "breakers." He is of medium height, and mooth face, excepting a very light moustache.

monstache, When he leaves St. Paul. he goes directly, as before stated to the headwaters of the Yellow Stone, to meet Collins, when the subject of "Sioux" will at once be considered, as intimated.
